Terrible Loss of Life on Superior.

The Big Steel Steamer Western Reserve

Breaks in Two and Goes to the Bottom.

Twenty-Six Persons go to Davy Jones' Locker.

The Vessel Was Light and With Her Immense Power, and Great Weight Aft, Broke Across the Seas Like a Reed Over the Knee.

Sault Ste. Marie, Sept. 2.—The steel steam barge Western Reserve cleared from here Tuesday noon, light, for Two Harbors with a crew of 21 and a jolly party of passengers, consisting of Capt. P. G. Minch, his wife, three children and his wife's sister.

When the vessel passed Iroquois the wind came up strong from the west and she commenced to pound. This continued getting worse. While on the course between White Fish point and Keweenaw, without a moment's warning, at 9 o'clock Tuesday night she split in two about amidships and sank in ten minutes.

The crew managed to get both yawls down, and nineteen persons got into the wooden boat, including Capt. Minch, his wife, three children and his wife's sister. The wind then increased to a furious northwest gale, and the yawl was tossed around by the heavy seas with its living cargo until 7 o'clock Wednesday morning, when one mile from the shore and ten miles below Grand Marais, near live saving station No. 12, she capsized, and all hands made a desperate attempt to reach the shore, but it was of no avail, as only one man succeeded, he being Harry Stewart, the wheelman, whose residence is in Algonac, Mich.

It is thought that Capt. Minch and others of the crew lost their lives in attempting to save the ladies and children.

Harry Stewart, the only survivor, reached here on the fish tug E. M. B. A. and when interviewed by your correspondent gave the following particulars:

"I have seen a great deal more severe storms on Lake Superior and cannot account for the breaking in two of our boat. Her machinery was all right, as were also her boilers. It was certainly the pounding she got. After our yawl left the boat we went back to it and took off the captain's sons and two watchmen.

"I was in the water for two hours. Our other yawl, a metallic one, was picked up by the tug E. M. B. A. in bad condition. There were 27 people on the Reserve, all told—21 of a crew and six passengers. There were no bodies found up to the time I left. When the boat capsized I was thrown out forward and started for shore, and could not see any of the struggle for life going on around me. The vessel's machinery was working when she went down. Captain Minch and his family were all aft and dressed when I got there. There were no words said by anyone, all they were thinking about was saving their lives.

The boat capsized 10 miles above Lifesaving station No. 12, but too far from the station for the crew to be of any help. The crew started up the shore to look for the bodies as soon as I got there. I did not see any of the wreckage except the metallic life boat, which is now at Deer Park.

"The only man I saw get into the metallic boat was the chief engineer. The first mate jumped overboard. I had a life belt on or would not have reached the shore. There were three others who had jackets besides the two ladies. I was in bed when the vessel broke in two. When I got to shore I lay down on the beach and was unable to rise, being fagged out. I am 24 years old and have been sailing on the lakes for five years. It was a most pitiable sight before we took to the yawls to see Captain Minch's little daughter begging for a life jacket."

Those Who Were Drowned.

The following passengers were drowned:
Captain P. G. Minch.
Mrs. P. G. Minch.
Charlie Minch, aged 10 years.
Flora Minch, aged 6 years.
Mrs. Jacob Englebry, of Vermillion.
Bertha Englebry, aged 9 years.

The crew consisted of the captain and 20 men. The list of the crew has been compiled with care, but all the names could not be obtained. It is certain, however, that the following were on the boat when she was lost:

Albert Myers, of Vermillion, captain.
Fred Engalls, of Brooklyn, first mate.
Charles Le Beau, of Sand Beach, Mich., second mate.
William H. Seaman, No. 302 Clinton street, Cleveland, chief engineer.
Charles Wills, of Saginaw, Mich., second engineer.
Bert Smith, of Ashtabula, O., steward.
George Davis, No. 14 Aust street, Cleveland, assistant steward.
Carl Myers, of Vermillion, wheelsman.
Harry Stewart, of Algonac, Mich., (the only known survivor), wheelsman.
Daniel Forbes, of Algonac, Mich., watchman.
Robert Simpson, of No. 672 Detroit street, Cleveland, oiler.
Schuyler Stewart, of Algonac, Mich., watchman.
Martin Klaussen, of Huron, O., oiler.

The names of the following deck hands and firemen are taken from the last trip sheet left on shore. It is thought that at least two of these were not on board. Shipping Master Rumsey stated that Captain Myers had applied to him by telephone for two men, but when these were sent to the boat it was found that the captain, who was in a hurry, had secured the two men elsewhere:

S. T. Hatten, fireman.
John Latcham, fireman.
Horace Borough, fireman.
Daniel Stickney, deck hand.
R. Longfield, deck hand.
Albert Davenport, deck hand.
Daniel O'Connell, deck hand.
M. Coffee, deck hand.
John Wilson, deck hand.

Fred Ingalls, the first mate, is said to have been a relative of Captain Myers. He has sailed on the Western Reserve for the past two seasons.

David Forbes, the lookout, was a resident of Algonac, Mich., but beyond this little is known of him.

George Davis, the assistant steward, was a son of L. C. Davis, of 14 Aust street, Cleveland. The young man was but 19 years of age, and this was his first trip on the lakes.

Robert H. Simpson was a young man 22 years of age. He was a machinist by trade, but, being out of work, shipped as oiler. This was his first trip on any boat as an employe. His home was at No. 672 Detroit street.

Carl Myers, the wheelsman, was a son of Captain Myers.

Newberry, Mich., Sept. 2.—The life saving crew of the Grand Marias station are patroling the beach for ten miles each way to-day in search for bodies from the steamer Western Reserve, which foundered off this point Tuesday night.

Up to noon but three bodies had been recovered. One of them is known to be that of Capt. Peter Minch, the owner of the steamer. The body of the woman found last night is still unidentified. The remains are but partially clothed, indicating that she had rushed from her stateroom to the deck only to find the steamer sinking. She had not had time to return for her clothing, but had been hurried into the yawl boat.

The third body is also unidentified.

Harry Stewart, the sole survivor, has not yet returned from Sault Ste. Marie to identify the dead, but is expected this afternoon.

Telegraphic orders were received from Cleveland to-day to properly care for the dead, and the son of the owner will reach here to-morrow to take personal charge.

As Told by Stewart.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Sept. 2.—All vessels passing through the canal to-day have their flags at half mast in respect to the memory of the crew of the steamer Western Reserve, which now lies in 600 feet of water 60 miles northwest of White Fish Point. Harry W. Stewart, the only survivor, gave some additional particulars of the disaster to-day. It was a pitiful tale of a hopeless struggle for life. He said:

"The yawl that I was in was too small to hold the crew of 19. It was loaded down to within a foot of the water, and all night the spray kept breaking over us.

"We worked continually bailing out water with the only pail we had and our hats. I remember Mrs. Minch hanging to one of the children and making a desperate effort for life. Just then I heard Mr. Minch cry out, "My God, there goes one of my children."

"Carl Meyer, the captain's son, and I were together. He asked me if I thought we could reach the shore. I said we will try.

"The last I saw of him was four or five rods from the boat which had capsized. (This boat was afterwards found by the life saving crew.

"While we were in the yawl," young Stewart continues, "a steamer passed us. We could see her plainly. We shouted and screamed for half an hour, but in the roar of the storm they could not hear us.

"If we had had a light they could have seen us. As afinal resort we tried to burn one of the women's shawls, but it was too wet and would not light.

"I do not think the bodies will rise. Only those who had life jackets were the the two ladies, Carl Meyer, Burt Smith.

"The life jacket I secured was in the bottom of the yawl when she capsized. Some onehad thrown it off, and I got hold of it and put it on in the water. and one fireman.

"It is not true that the crew were in a panic all the time after the steamer broke in two. To the contrary everybody seemed cool. We put the children in the life boat first and then all hands got in.

"The metallic lifeboat broke up very soon and we had to take its occupants off it. It was not long before the steamer went down. As she sank we heard a very loud report, but don't know what it was. I have no idea what caused the steamer to break in two. She was carrying water ballast aft, but don't think there was any forward when she broke her mainmast.

"I do not understand why the mainmast should have broken and fallen on the deck; it is all a mystery to me."

Down bound boats report passing a large quantity of wreckage from the lost steamer.

Joseph Greathouse, mate of the vessel.
N. Mahen, ordinary seaman.

The captain and two other sailors held fast to the wreck during the night and were rescued yesterday by Capt. Lambert, light keeper on Chantry island.

JOHN L. SULLIVAN.

His Train Bound for the Fighting Ground.

A Large Crowd of People Turn Out to Cheer the Champion on His Way.

Erie, Pa., Sept. 2.—The "John L. Sullivan" train on its way to New Orleans passed here at 9:30 this morning. Phil Casey, who is on the train, told a United Press reporter that Sullivan had pased the night very well, having slept until Buffalo was reached, about 7 o'clock. At Buffalo a large crowd gathered to greet the great fighter. Among the throng waiting at the Buffalo depot was a remarkably pretty woman, stylishly dressed, who had been waiting at the depot since 4 a. m. for the purpose of having a look at the champion. She was, however, compelled to go away without having her desire satisfied, as the big fellow did not leave his berth until the train was well on its way to this place.

The train was viewed by large parties during the night along the line up to as late as 2 a. m., at which time a stop was made at Syracuse.

In this city there were fully 200 people waiting at that hour and they made a great noise. If Sullivan heard it he paid no attention to it. When the train stopped at Coeyman's Junction, several sporting men from Albany and Troy, headed by a brass band, marched to the station and boarded the train.

When Sullivan got up this morning he ate a hearty breakfast of chops, four soft boiled eggs, some stale bread, a leg of cold chicken and two cups of tea made with water that his handlers have brought along in order that their charge will not have to change when he reaches the south. The big fellow ate with a relish, but was not apparently in very good humor. He spoke scarcely a word during the morning.

NEARLY TWO THOUSAND

Persons Have Died in the City of Hamburg.

Families Fleeing From the Stricken City.

Latest Reports From All Over the World Where the Dread Disease is Raging.

Hamburg, Sept. 2.—The thermometer has fallen to 70 degrees Fahrenheit and there have been several light showers. The air is cooler than it has been in the last ten days. Nevertheless the abatement of the plague has not been so considerable as to bring much comfort to the stricken city.

The most trustworthy reports give the number of fresh cases as 681 and of deaths of 247. The decrease in the number of fresh cases since yesterday is 42; in the number of deaths 23. These figures do not agree, however, with the reports of the Hamburg officials, who have reduced the number of deaths to 45. The city government has thus again declared for the fatuous policy of suppressing the facts and its reports are received with ridicule. The number of burials has fallen from 395 to 313.

Reports of an abatement of the panic in consequence of the low death rate to-day, are not trustworthy. They emanate from official sources and are part of the general plan of concealing the situation. The people are too thoroughly frightened to be reassured by a slight change which is likely to be succeeded to-morrow, with a return of the high temperature, by an increase of the plague.

The flight of persons who constitute the city's business and society world continues. About ten thousand persons left on the railways to-day. All these were citizens with their families, as non-residents practically deserted the city early in the week. Most of them left in such haste that their baggage will be sent after them.

Porters have left their post and the transporation companies are too short handed to handle half the baggage of the fugutives, so that most families going away are obliged to leave behind what they cannot carry.

Many postmen are among the victims today and the delivery of the mails has been much retarded. A postal official today said that the business of the postoffice had fallen off 50 per cent. in the last five days and that apparently business correspondence was dead.

All the factories have been closed for an indefinite period. Families of workmen thrown out of empolyment have begun applying for aid. In the harbor district great want is already apparent. If not speedily stilled it will facilitate the progress of the plague among the ill-nourished poor.

The number of physicians attending cholera patients is quite inadequate. This state of affairs was apparent several days ago, but the municipal authorities neglected to call for aid from other towns.

The physicians who have been among the stricken from the first are now worn out by overwork and few are at hand to take their places. Almost a third of the deaths to-day are said to have taken place before any medical aid could be secured. In the harbor district only about four patients among seven are able to secure physicians to treat them.

There is also great difficulty in getting nurses to replace those retiring from the hospitals because worn out by the killing work imposed upon them in the last 10 days.

The most urgent appeals for help have come this afternoon from the suburbs, Horn and Hammerbrock, where the people have died by the dozen since daybreak. Nurses, doctors and health officers are said to have left these suburbs almost unnoticed and whole families have been wiped out without having had a word of advice or a prescription.

The harm done to the rest of North Germany by the official incompetency is enormous. Persons fleeing from the city in the last five days have carried the infection to 23 other North German towns. In Lubeck, Liehnitz, Ruda, Bergedorf, Neukirch, in upper Silesia, Madgeburg and more than a dozen villages the breaking out of the plague has been due directly to the arrivals from this port.

At a meeting of various civic bodies and medical authorities to-day it was resolved to establish safety committees to co-operate with the police in the work of disinfecting houses in which cholera has developed. The senate has appointed a cholera committee which will meet daily in the town hall and adopt whatever measures may be required to combat the epidemic.

The official report of the total number of cases of cholera and deaths in this city since the first outbreak of the scourge here shows that 3,888 persons have been attacked by the disease and that death has resulted in 1,778 cases.

Washington, Sept. 2.—At the cabinet meeting it was decided not to issue a proclamation at this time, but to issue a special circular instead, which was later done by direction of the president as follows:

Quarantine restrictions upon immigration to aid in the prevention of the introduction of cholera into the United States.

The collectors of customs, medical officers of the Marine hospital service, foreign steamship companies, state and local boards of health:

It having been officially declared that cholera is prevailing in various portions of Russia, Germany, and France, and at certain ports in Great Britain, as well as in Asia: and it having been made to appear that immigrants in large numbers are coming into the United States from the infected district aforesaid, and that they and their personal effects are liable to introduce cholera into the United States, and that vessels conveying them are thereby a direct menace to the public health; and it having been further shown that under the laws of the several states quarantine detention may be imposed upon these vessels of a sufficient length of time to insure against the introduction of contagious diseases, it is hereby ordered that no vessel from any foreign port carrying immigrants shall be admitted to enter at any port of the United States until said vessel shall have undergone a quarantine detention of 20 days (unless such detention is forbidden by the laws of the state or the regulations made thereunder) and of such greater number of days as may be fixed in each special case by the state authorities.

This circular to take immediate effect except in cases of vessels afloat at this date, which will be made the subject of special consideration upon due application to the department.

WALTER WYMAN.
Supervising Surgeon General United States Marine Hospital Service.
CHARLES FOSTER,
Secretary of the Treasury.
Approved. BENJ. HARRISON.

New York, Sept. 2.—President Harrison's expected order caused a sensation among the steamship agents in this city yesterday. The president's circular letter will practically stop all immigration while the cholera epidemic lasts. Steamship agents recognize the fact that they will have to give up steerage traffic to the detriment of their business. Capt. Underhill, of the Union line, said:

"The president's proclamation will practically stop immigration to the United States, but I think it will not affect those who go to Montreal and can cross the border to the United States. My opinion is that we will have the cholera, but not until next spring."

Other agents have nothing to say, and many have cabled for instructions, which will probably be orders discontinuing the traffic until further notice, the traffic from this side to continue as usual. It is estimated that the steamship companies will lose $2,000,000 a month while the 20 days quarantine regulations are being carried out, $1,000,000 representing the loss from steerage traffic alone, while the remainder represents the loss arising out of diminished outgoing cabin passengers and loss of freight and incidental expenses.

New York, Sept. 2.—The health inspector made a careful examination of the suspected cholera patient at 95 Orchard street late last night and reported to Dr. Roberts at sanitary headquarters that it was neither cholera nor cholerine. About 1 o'clock this morning Dr. Beck, of No. 14 Rivingston street, called at the Eldridge station and said he had been called to attend another immigrant on Orchard street, who came on the Russia from Hamburg and whose symptoms were the same and much more aggravated. Dr. Beck expressed the belief in spite of the health inspectors' report that both his patients were suffering from cholerine.

ON ACCOUNT OF CHOLERA.

Possible that the Monetary Conference Will be Deferred.

Washington, Sept. 2.—Secretary Foster said this afternoon that there had been as yet no place or time fixed upon for the meeting of the international monetary conference. Should the cholera continue its menacing course, the opinion is expressed at the treasury department that it is altogether probable that the meeting of the conference will be deferred until some later date, when the danger from the scourge will not be so great as now.

Sarnia, Ont., Sept. 2.—A car containing thirty immigrants on the morning express from Buffalo is detained at the tunnel station here owing to the refusal of the United States authorities to allow the car to enter their territory on account of the illness of several of the occupants from what it is feared may be cholera.

Madrid, Sept. 2.—A medical inspector on the French frontier at Trun has sent to the hospital several cholera suspects who arrived on a train from France.

Berlin, Sept. 2.—The imperial sanitary office reports deaths from cholera in many towns in Silesia, Zehtezwig, Luneberg and Posen. The Hamburg-Heligoland steamers have been suspended.

Paris, Sept. 2.—The newspapers here comment earnestly upon the silence of the English consuls at Hamburg while cholera is prevailing there. The opinion is expressed that these officials ought to keep their respective countries thoroughly informed as to the actual situation.

Montreal, Sept. 2.—The international quarantine inspection commission held a conference with the civic health authorities and the railroad and steamship representatives here yesterday in regard to the precautions being taken to prevent the introduction of cholera into this country.

The commissioners left for Quebec last night. They will visit and inspect the Grosse isle quarantine station, returning to Montreal on Saturday, leaving the same evening for New York. After inspecting the quarantine arrangements there they will proceed to Boston, Portland and Halifax.

Paris, Sept. 2.—The disease described as cholera is steadily declining with the approach of cool weather. Yesterday there were 15 new cases and 3 deaths.

The Russian Jew emigrants who have been encamped near Lyons for about a fortnight because the steamships from Marseilles for the United States were afraid to take them on account of their coming from the infected districts, have been shut out from going by the way of Havre as was more recently intended on account of the prevalence of cholera at port and the severity of the American quarantine. They have to-day started for the French seaport of Dieppe. Thence they are to be conveyed to Liverpool and from Liverpool they are to be taken by steamer to Canada, whence it is understood they will make the best of their way into the United States. It is said this new method is to be extensively followed by Russian Jews and other emigrants.

Quarantine, Sept. 2.—The steerage passengers of the steamship Gallia now in quarantine were put aboard the steamboat William Fletcher and transferred to Hoffman's Island this morning.

New York, Sept. 2.—The two cases at 92 Orchard street reported last night by Dr. Beck as virulent cholerine, have been thoroughly investigated by the health officers who after a most careful diagnosis, reported both men to be suffering from acute diarrhea.

Philadelphia, Sept. 2.—A brief meeting of the board of health was held to-day and it was decided that the port physicians should remain at the Lazaretto and exercise a strict oversight of the passengers who board the British Princess, now held in quarantine.

Dr. Leffman, who is the port physician, will remain aboard the steamer and closely watch for any symptoms of the dreaded disease. When the Lord Gough arrives, probably on Sunday or Monday, she will be met at once and similar precautions observed as in the detention of the British Princess.

A communication from Major Veale was received stating that the steamship Minnesota, from London, at pier 48, has on board 119 bales of rags from Belgium and about 1,500 bales of wool from Dundee, Scotland, but said to have been gathered in Russia.

These rags will be detained until the board is satisfied that they ar not infected.

Moscow, Sept. 2.—The death rate from cholera is increasing owing to the increasing heat. The number of deaths has doubled within a week.

Quarantine, S. I., Sept. 2.—Health Officer Jenkins was more hopeful and less anxious this morning than he has been any time since the unfortunate steamer Moravia arrived here with her pitiful story of pestilence and death. The fact that no new cases had developed among the passengers of the pest-infected vessels gave the quarantine officials reason to hope that they had the dreaded plague well in hand.

They are beginning to hope that the scourge has been effectually checked, at least so far as the Moravia is concerned. The plague stricken vessel lies on the outer edge of Gravesend bay at a safe distance from the shore and she is given a wide berth by all vessels passing in that vicinity. Orders have been issued to allow no one to go aboard or leave the steamer. Dr. Jenkins has also issued orders that no persons other than those employed, must be permitted to go aboard the quarantine boats or vessels in quarantine without written permission from the health authorities.

Upward of 25 suspicious vessels are due from now on until the expiration of the next 10 days and the quarantine health doctors are preparing to meet them. It seems almost certain that some of them will bring cases of cholera on board.

Dr. Jenkins says he has power to determine how long vessels should remain in quarantine and notwithstanding the president's proclamation, he proposes to use his own discretion, and, if necessary, or as the case demands, suspicious ships will held a longer or shorter period than 20 days. His action will be taken with the understanding that he alone is responsible, and the president will not be considered. As the case now stands President Harrison's proclamation will be ignored at quarantine.

"I shall be governed by the state laws entirely," said Dr. Jenkins, "and President Harrison's proclamation does not apply to this port. I am invested with power to hold any vessel so long as I deem it necessary, and no vessel will be detained for 20 days unless occasion requires. I shall hold them six months if necessary."

The Staten Island police are co-operating with Dr. Jenkins.

KNIGHTS OF THE KEY.

Will the Telegraphers Go on a Strike?

Important Meeting Being Held in Kansas City.

First of the Kind Since the Great Strike of Nearly Ten Years Ago.

Kansas City, Sept. 2.—Whether or not there will be a general strike of the commercial telegraphers will be decided by the convention of their organization being held in this city to-day.

Although the gathering comprises several hundred delegates from New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Baltimore, Richmond, New Orleans, Cincinnati, Cleveland, St. Louis and Chicago, it is not generally thought that the much talked of "International Universal Telegraphers' union is suddenly organized to undertake the responsibility of inaugurating a strike, and even if it should issue an edict to this effect the Western Union and Postal Telegraph officials claim that it would be disregarded by a majority of the operators.

The association claims to have enlisted nearly all of the expert men in the employ of the two companies, and that united action on the part of these alone would be sufficient to bring the companies to terms, as rapid operators are not a commodity to be obtained at any time and at any price, the great majority of them now being in the employ of lessees of private wires and the two press associations.

The first meeting of the International Universal Telegraphers' association was held in St. Louis in July, 1888.

Forty-two operators participated, and it was then and there decided to effect a permanent organization to include every person connected with telegraphy in the United States.

The organization first made its existence known to the general public upon the occasion of the national convention of Railway Telegraphers at Chattanooga in May of this year. Representatives of the International association addressed the meeting with a view to learning upon what basis the two organizations could or would consolidate. The railway men consulted the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, which was then in session at Atlanta, and were promptly notified by that body that a consolidation with the commercial operators would rob the order of the support of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

This at once ended all negotiations between the organizations, July 14 last the Train Dispatchers' association met at New Orleans, and the Commercial men sent representatives to confer with them.

Preferring to retain the friendship of the engineers the dispatchers rejected their propositions. It was after this double setback that the men back of the International association began work in earnest, and inaugurated the movement which has resulted in the gathering of to-day. The meeting is being held with closed doors, and if a strike is decided upon the proceedings will not be made public until formal notice of that fact is served upon the companies.

MOST BLOODY CRIME

Four Deaths Will Result From a Shooting.

Divided Opinion as to the Author.

All Steubenville Excited as They Never Have Been Before Over the Awful Tragedy.

Steubenville, O., Sept. 2.—Within two and a half miles of this city was committed a most horrible crime. John Skinner, a hired man working for George Feetner, a German farmer, used a revolver with deadly effect, shooting Feetner, killing him, then going up stairs and shooting Mrs. Feetner, who was lying on a sick bed with typhoid fever, and Mr. Feetner's mother, a gray-haired, feeble old lady. He then placed the revolver to his own head and ended his existence and cheated the gallows, or an outraged community, who would surely have wreaked a terribly vengeance upon him had he not spared them the trouble.

Dr. B. H. Fisher, who is attending Mrs. Feetner, opened the door of the house about 9 o'clock. The dead bodies of two men weltering in their life's blood met his gaze. After he was over his astonishment he examined them and found that Feetner was shot in the breast and Skinner through the head. He heard a feeble call from upstairs and going up found Mrs. Feetner lying in bed with a hole under her left eye and one in the back of her head. Mr. Feetner's mother was lying alongside with a hole in the back of her head, unconscious, not yet dead, but her time on earth is short.

The villain had stood over their bed and emptied his revolver, neither being able to resist. What prompted Skinner to do the deed is unknown. Probably he shot Feetner in a quarrel, to cover up his crime, shot the wife and mother, and as a result of remorse took his own life. Hundreds of people are flocking to the bloody scene.

A new phase of the terrible tragedy developed to-day. It is the opinion after reading Mrs. Feetner's note, that she had something to do with the shooting. The note reads:

August 31.

"John Skinner came in this evening about 9 o'clock. Shot George first, and then mother and me, and then said: "What will I do?" and then got George's revolver and shot himself. Don't accuse anyone else. ANNIE FEETNER."

It is thought that Mrs. Feetner heard the men quarreling down stairs, and being ill with typhoid fever and deranged, as typhoid patients sometimes are, hunted up her husband's revolver, and going down stairs began shooting when the men were grappled together, shooting both in her frenzied condition, and then realizing the awfulness of her crime, shot her mother and herself. All Steubenville is talking about the affair.

REARRESTED.

St. Marys, O., Sept. 2.—(Special.)—Henry Crab, who was arrested for horse stealing about a year ago and cleared, was captured and rearrested by Marshal Cullikon yesterday, near Peoria, Ill., and taken to jail at Wapakoneta.

NINE MILES IN SIX MINUTES.

New York, Sept. 2.—A special to the World from Buffalo says the first train out on the Philadelphia and Reading road left this morning and made the phenomenal run of nine miles in six minutes. The train consisted of an engine and two heavy passenger coaches, and all through to Rochester the run averaged a mile a minute.

LIZZIE BORDEN HELD.

Bound Over to be Tried for Murder.

Strong Arguments on Both Sides.

The Judge Thought the Young Lady Was Guilty and So Ruled in Her Case.

Fall River, Mass., Sept. 2.—When court assembled Mr. Jennings opened for the defense.

He said that Andrew J. Borden was murdered, there is no doubt, and that the time of the murder has been established there is no doubt.. The alarm was given at 11:13 to 11:15, and we know, so far as we can know from the evidence, that the time between Mr. Borden's last entrance to the house and the alarm, from 25 minutes to half an hour covers the time fully.

Blow after blow, cutting through the hair into the brain, were rained on these persons, showing that the person who did the deed wanted to make sure.

There was an unnecessary brutality that suggests infernal hatred and revenge or insanity.

This case is one of circumstances and if there are those which weigh against the defendant you are bound to observe those which are for her equally as well. It becomes the duty of the commonwealth to investigate a crime of this nature with the utmost care, that the guilty should be found.

The theory of the government seems to have been that the crime was committed by inmates of the house; all thir work seems to have been directed by that one idea. It is claimed that nobody could get out of the house without being seen because there were people all around. The government knows the house has been broken into in the day time within two years and the barn broken into within two months and the facts are not disputed; we show something the police ought to have discovered—the stranger within the gate, as told by Mrs. Manley.

They have spent night and day following up clues to convict Lizzie Borden, but know nothing about Mrs. Manley and the man she saw. Why? Because they are not looking for anybody outside. The extraordinary thing is that the police can't find the man Dr. Handy saw, but they can find the axe or axes Lizzie Borden killed her father with. So far as we know, Morse, Lizzie and Bridget Sullivan were the only persons in the house at the time with the murdered persons. Mr. Morse having accounted for his time, leaves the others alone. He did not believe that either Bridget Sullivan or Lizzie committed the deed. If Lizzie had an opportunity to commit this murder, Bridget Sullivan had an opportunity. Bridget says she was out of doors, but who else saw her out there but Mrs. Churchill? Counsel did not desire to show that Bridget was guilty, but was only trying to show the extraordinary course of the government towards Lizzie.

No crime is ever committed without a motive and the government is bound to show Lizzie had a motive, and without that they have got to fail.

It has been published that this girl was on the most bitter terms with her father and mother, and that was the motive given by the government, but the evidence does not back that up.

There is only one little item, that five years ago Lizzie ceased to call her stepmother "mother," but Lizzie says her relations were friendly with her mother in every way and that her parents were on good terms.

You hear of murders committed by those who are spendthrifts; who are pressed by their creditors or their mistresses, but never in the case of a person who has $2,500 recently paid her, who has no want of money and where there was never anything but the kindliest feelings between the persons. And yet, without a single thing to suggest the cause, the government holds to it that Lizzie Borden is a murderess.

In concluding, the counsel demanded the woman's release; there is nothing to hold her on; this court is going to pass a judgment here that would stand, and if the grand jury has any evidence to hold her they can easily find her at any time; she is not going to run away. They can't find any motive, any blood, any poison, and counsel said a woman brought up as she had been should not be sent to prison. Don't put the stigma of this thing upon this woman until you have a reason to do so.

At the conclusion of Mr. Jennings' argument the crowd broke into applause.

At 2 o'clock District Attorney Knowlton proceeded to make the argument for the government. After some preliminary remarks on the nature of the crime of murder, he argued that the blows were struck from behind, by a weak, irresolute, imperfect female hand that only knew the impulse to strike. He then proceeded to review the testimony at great length, taking up one by one the points made by the counsel for the defense. The demeanor of the defendant was remarkable. No one had yet found the wrap that covered Lizzie Borden and took the blood from those bodies; or the hatchet which did the work. This thing was conceived in the head of a cool-headed, deliberate woman.

Judge Blaisdell said that sympathy should be laid aside, and duty, stern duty, required upon this evidence but one thing to be done. "Supposing a man was seen in the chamber of Mrs. Borden, and that he was in the room of the father when death came; suppose that a man should tell as many different stories as Lizzie has done—the way would be plain. I find that she is probably guilty."

The accused was ordered to the county jail for trial at the November term. All of the witnesses were ordered to recognize for the November term of court.

TO RAISE THE MORALS.

An Important Question in England.

Farm Servants Must Be Better Cared for in Order to Prevent Crime.

London, Sept. 2.—The Economic branch of the British association has just completed its session at Edinburgh, and as a result of its deliberations it is probable that parliamentary action will soon be taken to effect a reform in the dwellings furnished by landlords to their tenants and servants.

The most important question discussed was the subject of illegitimacy in the rural districts. It was demonstrated that the evil in Banffshire was extraordinarily great.

Reviewing the five years from 1887 to 1891 it was found that all the town districts showed an improvement, while the purely rural districts were, as a rule, getting worse. Examining the causes which produced this it was decided that the one main cause was the want of dwelling house accommodations for married servants on farms and for servants inclined to marry. It is proposed to remedy this evil by providing cottages proportionate to the size of farms, and granting compulsory powers to county councils.

Mr. S. Bourne, who has devoted considerable attention to this subject, maintained that the proportion of illegitimacy was not to be taken as an absolute test of the standard of morality in a community. He did not think that one-roomed houses were a very wide source of illegitimacy. He thought there was a great deal in race and heredity, and that a very strong cause existed in the marriage laws of Scotland, and the facility with which illegitimate children were legitimatized by subsequent marriage.

Professor Thomas Smith urged that the bothy system which prevails in many parts of Scotland should be done away with, but believed that they must mainly depend on the influence of religion and education to raise the morals of the people.

COMPLETING ARRANGEMENTS

For the Grand Labor Day Demonstration.

A Mammoth Parade—The Girls Will Ride in Carriages—List of Prizes.

The committees in charge of the arrangements for Labor day met last evening at Carpenters' hall.

The reports are encouraging, and the prospects are that the demonstration this year will eclipse anything of the kind ever seen in Toledo.

The picnic will be held at Metropolitan park; there will be dancing, games of various kinds and races. The streets need cleaning, and Messrs. Reilly and Byron were appointed a committee to wait on the street commissioner and persuade him to attend to it.

The chief of police will also be asked to allow a squad of police to head the parade and preserve order at the grounds.

The managers of the Detroit exposition have given the committee on privileges a number of the exhibits recently shown at Detroit, and these will prove a great attraction.

The members of the Working Girls' union will appear in the parade in carriages.

Mr. Reilly, chairman of the ground committee was instructed to secure the services of three men, to take charge of the dancing pavilion and arrangements.

SMALL BILLS THE FASHION.

They Are Printed and Issued and the Large Denominations Destroyed.

Washington, Sept. 2.—The people in the office of the United States treasurer and the force of the bureau of engraving and printing are having a good deal of extra work to do just now. This is because of the demand for money with which to move the crops, some facts in regard to which were given in a recent dispatch from this point. Small notes continue to be what are most needed. To supply them has necessitated considerable hustling.

Under the law the secretary of the treasury is prohibited from reducing the amount of currency outstanding to less than $346,000,000. Now all money that comes from the bureau of engraving and printing, where it is struck off, is put in what is known as the reserve vault.

From there, as it is needed, it goes to the treasurer's vaults. When it reaches the latter it is regarded as outstanding, as it is subject to use in meeting any and all demands. Along will come an order for $100,000 in $1 notes. They are not on hand, but there are notes of $500, $1,000 and $10,000 ready

To supply the demand for the ones a like amount of notes of the higher denominations are destroyed, and the reserve vaults are called upon. Then the bureau of engraving is required to make good to the reserve vault the notes taken therefrom.

This process goes on every day. The number of notes of big denominations is getting smaller and smaller, as they are being destroyed to make room for the small ones. This will be kept up until the crop money, having been used for the purposes for which it was drawn out of the treasury, begins to come back.

Then there will be a destruction of smaller notes that they may be replaced by larger ones. The whole thing demonstrates how closely the operations of the treasury and the busines of the country are allied.

FOSTORIA.

An Immense Crowd of People Attend the Fair.

Fostoria, O., Sept. 2.—(Special)—An immense crowd of people attended the fair. They came in from every direction by rail, horseback and vehicle, and a conservative estimate would place the attendance at 15,000. The races yesterday were interesting and exciting. The score is as follows:

In the three minute trot Moses captured first prize, Josie W. second, and Orlop third. Purse $100. Time, 2:57, 2:46 1-4, 2:45 1-4, 2:44 1-4.

Second race, 2:35 trot:

Purse, $300—M. W., first; Gladstone, second; L. F. H. third; Xanthe, fourth. Time, 2:32 1-4, 2:34 1-4, 2:31 1-4, 2:35, 2:35.

In the free-for-all trot Otto J. captured first money; Nickel Plate, second; Von Armin, third; Tariff, fourth. Time, 2:30, 2:36, 2:31. Purse $300.

REBUILDING.

Repairing the Damage Caused by the Fire.

St. Johns, N. F., Sept. 2.—Work is now well under way toward the reconstruction of the buildings in the district ravaged by the recent conflagration. Advantage is being taken of the present state of affairs to straighten and widen many of the streets, and in this respect, at least, the fire will prove a blessing, as many of the streets, especially in the shipping districts were totally inadequate to the demands upon them. The report of the committee appointed to investigate into the cause of the fire is strongly condemnatory of the city council and fire department.

COAL GOES UP.

New York, Sept. 2.—The retail coal dealers of Brooklyn decided Wednesday night to raise the price of coal 50 cents a ton from $5.25 to $5.75. The New Jersey coal exchange notified all dealers in Newark, N. J., that the price of Lehigh had been raised to $6 and free burning coal to $5.75.

SHEEHAN SPEAKS OUT.

He Says New York Will Go Democratic.

A Refutation of the Republican Twaddle Concerning Tammany's Action.

New York, Sept. 2.—An important meeting of the campaign committee of the democratic national committee has been held. Lieutenant Governor William Sheehan, who has just come to the city to take charge of the democratic state committee's headquarters, was in attendance.

It was his first appearance at the national headquarters since the day the campaign committee was organized. The other members of the campaign committee who answered the roll call were Chairman Harrity, Senator Gorman, William C. Whitney, Secretary Sheerin, of Indiana; General Smalley, of Vermont, and Josiah Quincy, of Massachusetts. The presence of Lieutenant Governor Sheehan enabled the committee to discuss the situation in New York.

It was an executive session, of course, and nothing was made public as to the details of the discussion, but it was learned after the meeting that the work to be done in New York was mapped out and that the campaign in this state will immediately take on additional vigor and added zest. Lieutenant Governor Sheehan assured the committee that the state would give Cleveland and Stevenson the biggest plurality ever given a democratic candidate.

All of the members of the campaign committee were in excellent spirits after the meeting. They acted as though they had received some very encouraging information, and as a matter of fact they did.

Lieutenant Governor Sheehan told the committee that Senator Hill would take the stump in a few days, and that he would make 40 speeches in this state during the campaign, covering the entire state from a geographical standpoint.

Among the national committeemen who were in consultation with the managers were Miles Ross of New Jersey, Basil Gordon of Virginia, and Charles B. Howry of Mississippi. All brought encouraging news. Basil Gordon said of Virginia that the political outlook there was improving daily. "The democrats in my state," he said, "are thoroughly aroused and participating more actively in the campaign than for many years."

The third party movement has been checked at all points, and is disintegrating in many. They have come to realize that they are being made the tools of the republican leaders, and however great the poverty and depression which has given rise to their party they are not prepared to sever lifelong associations and invoke upon their state the horrors which every southern man believes inseparable from the force bill. The state will give its usual majority for the democratic ticket."

Col. O. O. Stealey, the well known Washington correspondent of the Louisville Courier-Journal, Henry Watterson's paper, was among the callers.

His home is in Indiana, and speaking about that state, he said:

"There is one certainty in the situation as I view it. Indiana will cast her electoral vote for Cleveland and Stevenson. I have not the slightest doubt of that. Why, prominent republicans admit it to me privately. Men who have been here in New York and have been interviewed in the republican papers to the effect that Harrison was going to carry Indiana, confessed when pinned down in private conversation that they don't believe anything of the sort. The president is managing the campaign in his state himself, and he is not making a great success of it. The conditions are all against him. His treatment of Dudley, to whom he owed so much, has made him thousands of enemies in his own party. Then the state is full of disappointed office seekers, and Cleveland will beat the president by a comfortable majority."

BIG CROWDS AT BRYAN.

Farmer Scott Fooled the Boys With His Old Mare, Betsy—Notes.

Third heat was won by Red Flame, which gave him the race. St. Joe took second money, Vino distanced. Time 2:46 1-2.

Notes.

Toledo is well represented. Jake Weier, Arthur Brownsberger, Jeff Wheeler and others help to make up the large crowd present.

Christ Scott fooled the boys yesterday by giving an exhibition of speed with one of his farm horses, after driving to town, a distance of nine miles, he went out with old Betsy hitched to a roadcart and sent her under the wire in 2.49. She is not for sale.

The favorites have been winning and the poolsellers were hit hard.

The pneumatic sulky is decidedly "in it." The high wheel is a thing of the past. The pneumatic wheels are so constructed that they can be attached to any ordinary running geer at a small expense.

Bamboo, a trotter of some note, entered in the 2:32 class, met with an accident yesterday. On the way to the track he picked up a nail. Bamboo is owned by Geo. W. Jack, of Harrow, O., and was a great favorite.

TYPHUS FEVER.

Constantinople, Sept. 2.—Typhus fever is raging in the quarantine hospital at Sinope, a seaport town of Asia Minor on the Black sea, with considerable trade.

HARD AT WORK.

Gen. Stevenson Continues his Campaigning.

Herndon, Ky, Sept. 2.—Adlai Stevenson addressed a large audience here to-day. This place was selected for the demonstration on account of its being Mr. Stevenson's birth-place, and a larger crowd greeted him when he mounted the platform than has ever before assembled in this country. On the 7th Mr. Stevenson will speak at Indianapolis, and during the following week he will speak at different points in Indiana. September 15 he goes to North Carolina to make six speeches. October 1, he has promised to address a meeting at Woodside Park, Ohio, which is to be presided over by ex-Governor Campbell.

TOLEDO PRESS CLUB.

A Broad Guaged Constitution Adopted.

Newspaper Men Residing Within One Hundred Miles of Toledo As Active Members.

The Toledo Press club at its monthly meeting yesterday afternoon, adopted what is practically a new constitution. As will be noticed by the articles quoted, all reputable newspaper men living within 100 miles of Toledo are eligible for active membership with power to vote.

The constitution also provides for associate memberships which will be formed broad-guaged enough to take in the entire country.

The following will give an idea of the scope of the membership:

There shall be four classes of members: Active, non-resident, associate and honorary.

The active membership shall consist of reputable persons connected with the newspaper press in the city of Toledo, either as managers, proprietors, publishers, editors, reporters, regular contributors, artists or correspondents; those actively connected with the business department of any Toledo newspaper or periodicals published abroad, and those who may be engaged in literary pursuits other than journalism. No one shall be admitted to active membership who has not been a resident of or been engaged in business as above designated in Toledo for three months preceding the date of the application.

Non-resident members shall have all the qualifications of active members, and shall include those who reside outside and within 100 miles of Toledo. They shall enjoy all the privileges of active membership except those of voting and holding office.

Any resident of the United States or Canada is eligible to associate membership. They shall enjoy all the privileges of active members except voting and holding office.

Honorary members shall be such persons as the directors may see proper to admit, by a unanimous vote of all members present; no dues shall be attached, and the number shall never exceed 25. Honorary members shall be entitled to all the privileges of active members except those of voting and holding office.

Any active or non-resident member who retires from the profession may continue a member of the club upon the regular payment of dues.

A new system of dues was adopted as follows:

The initiation fee for active and non-resident members shall be $3, to accompany the application, and the dues 25 cents per month, payable monthly in advance. Dues may be commuted on payment of $50 in one sum, carrying with it a life membership. The initiation fee shall include the dues for the first month of membership.

The initiation fee for associate members shall be $10, and the dues shall be $5 per year, payable annually in advance. Any associate member, by the payment of $50, either in money or otherwise, will be entitled to a life membership.

Honorary members shall be exempt from all fees and dues. Such members can only be elected by a unanimous vote of the club at any regular meeting.

After three months' non-payment of dues or other indebtedness, members so defaulting shall be suspended, and shall lose all privileges of the club. Their names shall be posted in the club room, and after one month's further non-payment of dues or other charges, they shall be dropped from the rolls of the club. The secretary shall notify them in writing that their names have been dropped, and that they are no longer entitled to the privileges of membership. If within three months after such name has been dropped, such persons shall pay all arrearages of any kind, their names shall be returned to the roll, upon the approval of the membership committee. All dues are payable on the first day of every month, and such as remain unpaid after that day are in arrears.

Treasurer Coughlin was authorized to appoint and pay a collector, whose duty it will be to collect all dues and assessments.

A series of fall and winter entertainments are in contemplation. The club adjourned to meet Thursday, September 15, when a vice-president shall be elected and the new committees announced.

IT WAS AN OLD GAME,

But it Was Worked to the Queen's Taste.

An Entertaining Woman Attracts Bank Clerks' Attention While Thieves Do the Rest.

Montreal, Sept. 2.—A well-dressed woman drove up to the door of Nichols & Marter, brokers, Notre Dame street, yesterday afternoon, and summoning the clerk to the wagon asked him about exchange percentages and other business matters and then drove rapidly away.

When the clerk returned to the office he found that thieves had practically cleaned it out, securing between $3,000 and $4,000 in money and bonds. The thieves are believed to be Americans.

GOOD-BYE TO GRAND OPERA.

The Metropolitan Cannot be Repaired in Time for Abbey's Winter Season.

New York, Sept. 2.—In all probability there will be no grand opera in New York this winter. If there is any grand opera it will not be seen or heard in the Metropolitan Opera house.

James A. Roosevelt, chairman of the board of directors, is authority for this positive statement. Since the partial destruction of the opera house, last Saturday it has been asserted by Mr. Schoeffel, of Abbey, Schoeffel & Grau, that the opera season of 1892-93 would not be interrupted by the fire and that it would be possible to repair the great operatic hall within the prescribed time of ninety days.

Mr. Roosevelt denies this.

'I think," said Mr. Roosevelt yesterday, "that the contract with Messrs. Abbey, Schoeffel & Grau is abrogated by the fire. I don't believe the repairs can be made within six months. At all events, there will be a meeting of the directors on Thursday of next week and the stockholders will meet on the following day. At these meetings it will be determined whether the money necessary to restore the opera house will be subscribed or whether the company will be reorganized. To restore the building will cost the stockholders about $10,000 each. Ten of these have not paid their assessments, and only sixty are left to subscribe.

"I paid $18,000 for my box, and with the assessment of $3,000 a year my opera has cost me about $60,000."

NAMED FOR CONGRESS.

Van Wert, Sept. 2.—The republicans of the Fifth district met in this city and nominated C. L. Griffith, of Putnam county, for congress. J. R. Ross, editor of the Paulding Republican, was nominated as presidential elector.

HAS RESIGNED.

New York, Sept. 2.—A special to the Herald from Washington says Assistant Secretary Crounse, of the treasury department, tendered his resignation yesterday to Secretary Foster to enter the gubernatorial campaign in Nebraska. He will look after the work of his department until his successor has qualified.

SOCIAL SCIENCE.

Closing Day of the Session in Saratoga.

The Sweating System Receives Attention From the Pen of H. S. Wadlin.

Saratoga, N. Y., Sept. 2.—The last day's session of the Social Science convention was devoted to an interesting line of discussion upon the sweating system in Europe and America.

Mr. F. B. Sanborn, president of the department of social economy, presided and made a few pertinent remarks. In his report upon the sweating system, Secretary Joseph Lee alluded to the efforts New York state is making to secure the abolition of that kind of labor.

The most interesting paper of the day was that read by H. S. Wadlin, labor commissioner of Massachusetts, upon the sweating system in vogue in that state. He says that the system is confined mainly to the manufacture of clothing, of which $25,000,000 worth is made each year, and 90 per cent. under the sweating system.

One half of the work is done in Boston, one-sixth in New York city, one-fourth in Maine and the rest in New Hampshire and New Jersey.

In Boston the work is mainly confined to finishing, while in New York it consists in the entire making of a garment in family apartments. The amount of work being sent to New York by Boston contractors is increasing. Among the employes persons of foreign birth largely predominate.

The contract system is not in itself so objectionable, and the evils only occur when unscrupulous contractors undertake to do the work for less than living wages. To make a profit he employs men who for wages get a sort of royalty upon the amount of work they can drive their slaves to do in a day.

The work is done in some instances by the piece. Hours of labor are disregarded and the family employed eat, sleep and work in the same room, thus saving the contractor shop hire and factory regulations.

In New York the sweating system has not passed beyond the germinal stage and has by no means reached the proportions it has in Massachusetts. The conditions which make sweating possible are what it is desirable to remedy, and they are:

First—The method of employment including method of superintendence.

Second—The state of the work, change either of these and sweating will be prevented.

He detailed the method pursued in Massachusetts to compel the issue of licenses to those who wanted to work at home and closed by saying that it would contribute indirectly toward raising the standard of living among tenement house workers and so in a measure prevent sweating.

Papers upon the sweating system in England and Germany were read by Rev. John Graham Brooks and Mr. David Schloss, and a general debate followed, after which a recess was taken until 8 p. m.

SOLDIERS AND SAILORS REUNE.

North Amherst, O., Sept. 2.—The soldiers and sailors of Lorain county held a reunion here yesterday. A large crowd was in attendance and a good time was had. After an elegant repast had been enjoyed, a meeting was held in the town hall. A welcoming address was delivered by Mayor Reddington, after which Rev. Mr. Early made a ringing speech. Then came the election of officers. George W. Ford, of Avon, was elected president, and Lindsey Miner, of Avon, secretary and treasurer. A vice president was elected from each town in the county.

THE TAX INQUISITORS.

New Philadelphia, O., Sept. 2.—The sensation of the day is the suit brought against Hon. Beriah Wilkins by the auditor of Tuscarawas county for back taxes alleged to be due the county. The amount claimed is the modest sum of $65,000. This is a result of the work of the tax inquisitor lately hired by the commissioners.

HARRISON'S LETTER OF ACCEPTANCE.

Washington, Sept. 2.—It is understood that President Harrison's letter of acceptance will be made public on Monday morning next. Mr. Whitelaw Reid's will follow about September 15. Mr. Cleveland has not yet indicated when his letter of acceptance will be given out, but it is expected to be made public not later than September 20.

WASHED OVERBOARD.

New York, Sept. 2.—S. C. Christiansen, a Danish steerage passenger of the steamer Island, was standing on the fore-deck on August 24, when a heavy sea broke over the rail and threw him against the house under the bridge. He was probably stunned, as the wash of the wave carried him overboard and he was lost.

KILLED IN BATTLE.

London, Sept. 2.—A dispatch to the Daily News from Vienna says: It is reported from Mery that 2,000 Afghans were killed in the last battle with the revolting Hazaras.

The final blow-out of the season will be held at the Ohio Yacht club's home this evening. Arrangements have been made to have the Pastime leave the city at 5:30 o'clock this afternoon when the advance squad will go down. The next boat will leave at 8:30 o'clock.

There will be a concert, band concert, refreshments, fireworks and lantern parade. It will be the most elaborate celebration the O. Y. C. has attempted since its opening.

A Week of Opera.

The popularity of Donnelly and Miller's nautical comic opera, Ship Ahoy, in the east is not doubted when it ran 100 nights in New York and 150 nights in Boston. Whether it will meet with the approbation of Toledo theater goers, will be decided next Monday, when the opera will be presented at the Wheeler opera house. The production in this city will not differ from New York and Boston. All the scenery (which includes a carload) will be brought here, and the company, which comprises a metropolitan cast and a chorus of 40, will be complete. The organization's own orchestra, under the guidance of Fred Miller, jr., the composer of the opera, will render the music. The opera is said to be even brighter than Pinafore and Erminie, and doubtless when the curtain falls on the last scene of Ship Ahoy, this opera will be established in the hearts of Toledo theater goers. The engagement is for one week only.

Reserved Seats for the Exposition.

An innovation that will please many patrons of the Toledo exposition, will be the reserved seats in the grand stand. Regular plats have been arranged, and the tickets will be on sale at West's drug store. This will enable people to reserve their seats in the morning, and they will then be sure of them, no matter how late they may arrive. The idea is meeting with universal approval.

One of the finest displays on the grounds will be that of the Gendron Iron Wheel company. Scenic and lanscape artists have been at work for three weeks past and the exhibit is beautiful.

The entries in the speed department are even better than was expected, some of the finest speeders in the country having been entered.

Secretary Crane has his office at the grounds, and Miss Cowdrick, the assistant secretary, and the other assistants will remove to the grounds to-morrow afternoon.

THE REPUBLICAN PRIMARIES.

A Majority of the Central Committee Reverse the P. O. Plan.

A majority of the republican county central committee has signed a call for a meeting to be held to-morrow and it is understood that the same majority will vote to reconsider the postoffice primary plan.

Mr. Griffin's star is evident in the ascendant and he has the committee just about where he wants it.

There was an informal meeting yesterat republican headquarters and the Baber law as it stands will doubtlessly be adopted.

The military organizations will move in about October 1, but the housewarming will not be held until later, and the boys are going to make it the event of the season.

The contract for the stone work was awarded to Albert Neukom, his bid being $14,000.

THAT OLD HOUSE

Must Be Put in Better Condition Or Be Torn Down.

At the request of Health Officer Fisher the police board examined the old house on Superior street, adjoining Doyle, Scott & Lewis' office. The old shell was found to be in a terrible filthy condition, and it was impossible for the officers to continue the inspection without seeking fresh air at intervals. The health officer was directed to specify necessary repairs, with the alternative of having the house torn down.

A. K. Detwiler was arrested yesterday afternoon on a warrant sworn out by Dr. Fisher. The case was continued in police court until next Friday morning, pending an investigation by the police board.

LANG & JOHNSTON CO.

The Lang & Johnston Candy company, the formation of which the Bee announced a week ago, has secured the building 619 Monroe street and next week will begin operations.

The following officers and directors have been elected:

President, Chas. Johnston; vice president, F. J. Anderson; Secretary and treasurer, W. J. Lang. Directors, F. Lehman, John W. Keller, W. H. H. Reader and E. R. Hiett.

The company is composed solely of Toledo men and Toledo capital and the Bee wishes the company success.

THE WRECK OF THE RESERVE

The Absorbing Topic Among Marine Men Here.

The wreck of the steamship Western Reserve by breaking in two is the one absorbing topic of conversation in marine circles here. She was a new iron boat and one of the finest on the lakes. Her owner, Philip Minch, who is among the drowned, was well known here. His big steamship, Philip Minch, is a regular visitor at this port.

"I know Mr. Minch well," Mr. G. G. Hadley said to a Bee this morning. "He was one of the largest vessel owners on the lakes. The wreck of the vessel is one of the most wonderful and terrible things of which I have ever read. Think of that boat running light and without hardly a moment's warning breaking in two. The trouble lies with the shipbuilders, who must look to two things—the largest capacity possible with the shallowest draft. The Western Reserve was a handsome boat costing about $220,000, but she was evidently ill-fitted for such a sea at such a time."

In the Produce Exchange and along the wharves the terrible disaster is being talked of, and many varying opinions are expressed.

GRADE UNCHANGED

For the New Broadway Bridge---Council Committee Business.

Council committees on bridges and streets were the only ones that transacted any business last evening, as there was a small attendance of members. These two committees held a joint session and discussed the matter of raising the Broadway bridge over the Lake Shore tracks. Several property owners on Broadway were present and opposed any change of grade, and finally the committee decided that the new bridge should be on the same level as the present one. Messrs. Hassenzahl, Wolfman and Rutherford were appointed a sub-committee, who, with the mayor, city solicitor and city engineer, will confer with the Lake Shore officials on the matter.

The new bridge which is being built over the Lake Shore tracks at St. Clair street is 17 inches higher than the grade of the street, and the committees instructed the city solicitor to take legal measures to compel the railroad company to lower it.

After the joint session of these two committees the street committee met and disposed of a small amount of business.

There was some debate over a resolution to pave lower Summit street with asphalt, and Mr. Rutherford opposed it, but the resolution was finally approved, as a majority of the property owners had petitioned for it.

A resolution was also approved to establish the grade of Erie street from Harrison street to North Railroad avenue.

Ordinances were approved to establish the grades of Winthrop, Walnut, Parks, Third and Chicago streets and to pave Western avenue from Hawley to Wayne street.

The contract for paving the alley between Summit and St. Clair streets from Madison to Monroe streets was awarded to Wm. McMahon for $4,836.79.

It was the intention to hold an adjourned session of the board of councilmen to finish the week's business, but enough members did not put in an appearance.

THE SPREAD OF CHOLERA.

A Recollection of the Fatal Visitation of 1833.

On the subject of the spread of cholera by emigrants, furniture, clothing, fomites and the like, the following careful statement of facts may be well worth consideration at this time, while the country is menaced with a visitation of the dread scourge.

New Carlisle, situated in the western part of Clark county, Ohio, was, in 1833, a village of some six hundred inhabitants. It was, then, and had always been specially proverbial for its exemption from epidemic or other sickness. The surrounding country was also spoken of as an unusually healthy region. In August of that year I moved to the place for the purpose of engaging in my business.

On Thursday afternoon two four-horse wagons loaded with household furniture, women and children, halted in front of my dwelling, and opposite Porter's tavern. The weather was hot, and the roads exceedingly dusty. The movers were from Pennsylvania, and were bound for Piqua, twenty miles further west. The two families consisted of fourteen souls—four parents and ten children. There were sick children in the wagons, which they stated were suffering with summer complaint, induced by the heat and the fatigue of travel. They wished to stop a few days that they might recuperate. A vacant house was placed at their service, at the upper end of town, into which they moved temporarily, and where they received the kind attentions of citizens. On Friday morning one of the sick children was dead, and there were three others attacked; but there was no alarm. The doctors said it was diarrhoea brought on by the heated weather and the worry of travel.

On Saturday evening a lad of the moving families passed my house with a team of four horses on his way to the creek to water them. The boy was then well—on the next morning—Sunday—he was a corpse. On the same day an elderly couple by the name of Sommers, living at the opposite end of town, were both suddenly taken ill with didiarrhoea at about 10 o-clock, and both died before sundown. They had not been away from the house, and the distance from the quarters of the sick movers was a full half mile. In the afternoon of the same day a man of intemperate habits was violently attacked with the same conditions, and died before morning; and other scattering cases were reported. Cholera was in Dayton at the time, thirty miles to the south; and also some cases in Cincinnati, though the previous year was that of the dreadful visitation there.

And now, on Monday, alarm spread rapidly, and citizens began to flee from the town as fast as they could find the means of getting away. A message was dispatched in haste to Piqua, where the doctors had had experience with cholera the previous year. Two of the best men came, and at once pronounced the cases to be genuine Asiatic cholera. In the meanwhile the people were getting away as fast as was possible for them to do, until at last more than three-fourths of the citizens were gone, and every house was closed no attention was given to any kind of business. The postoffice was kept open, but there were few visited it. The daily stage was stopped, and all intercourse with other places entirely suspended. I told my wife it was our duty to go away, as we were yet, for the most part, strangers. Accordingly we took the stage on Tuesday and returned to South Charleston.

There was a family by the name of Brandenburg living on an adjacent street, who proved to be former acquaintances of the moving families in Pennsylvania. The family consisted of five members, viz.: the old people, two grown up sons, viz.: the linda, aged twenty-two. On Monday Malinda went to the sick house and washed and dried the clothes and was a corpse on Tuesday morning. When all was over there was but one of the Brandenburgs alive—one of the young men—of fourteen members of the movers, five were left alive, a man and women of opposite families, and three children. One of the men of the movers was almost a giant. He passed the stage while we were waiting to be driven away. He was asked how he felt, and replied that he was perfectly well, but worn out caring for the sick. He had been to the doctors. On Friday I saw Mr. Pitinger, of Carlisle, at the camp-meeting—he had taken his family to a place of safety, and then, on his way to the camp-meeting, came through Carlisle, and was told that the big man was dying. There were three young men, foot loose, and who could have left the stricken place at any moment, but instead they remained, caring for the sick and burying the dead, and examined unscathed. In some instances they nursed sick mothers after their daughters had fled and left them to their fate. There were sixty deaths among those few who had stood their ground, but including a few on suburban and adjacent farms. I rode back one day on horseback to see if my house and goods were safe. The cholera had ceased but the place was a desolation. When frost came I went and fetched my goods away. I had only sojourned there one month. The whole duration of the epidemic was about three weeks. New Carlisle has never grown much larger than it was in 1833; but it has been entirely healthy in every respect to this day.

Important inquiries arise. The movers had passed through Wheeling and Pittsburg on their way out, stopping one night in each place, and at a time when there was cholera slightly—in both towns, though not epidemic. Did the movers bring the germs of cholera from those places in their clothes, in their persons, or in their goods? The facts which followed more than justify the belief that such was the case.

A remarkable circumstance took place at a distillery on the south border of New Carlisle, that induced much speculation. Two days before the arrival of the moving wagons, out of three hundred hogs fed on still slop, seventy died inside of six consecutive hours; but there was no more of it. Was there any connection between the two maladies, in man and beast?

BUILDING ASSOCIATIONS.

Two London Concerns Close Their Doors.

London, Sept. 2.—The Kent and Surrey Building society of Woolwich has collapsed. It has been discovered that the secretary, George Bryceson, has been falsifying the books for years and has embezzled at least 50,000 pounds. The shareholders in the society are chiefly artisans employed in the Woolwich arsenal and small traders, who will lose everything they have invested.

Another building society collapsed to-day. It is called the Liberation Building society, and its failure is consequent on the suspension of payments by the London and general bank.

Tiffin, O., Sept. 2.—A dastardly and at the same time novel attempt at revenge was attempted in this city. The office of the Daily Tribune is always closed during the absence of the employees at dinner. About 1 o'clock John Von Blon, a reporter on the paper unlocked the door and entered. A few minutes later the city editor, John P. Locke, happened to come in and was horrified to find Von Blon unconscious and apparently dead. A physician chanced to pass and Von Blon was revived with difficulty. The gas jet had been turned on by some miscreant who had forced his entrance through a rear door.

ODD FELLOWS.

They Have a Splendid Time at Hamler.

Hamler, O., Sept. 2.—The fifth annual reunion of the I. O. O. F. of Henry county occurred at Hamler Wednesday, and was a success.

The village was decorated with flags and banners of welcome, and the weather being cool made the picnic enjoyable, while the smiling faces and hearty greeting as friend met friend showed the kindly feeling of brotherly love which existed.

There were nearly a thousand people on the grounds. Eleven lodges were represented, six from our own county.

The meeting was called to order by the president, G. F. Hayes, and the Hamler band opened the exercises by a selection of fine music.

Rev. Dilenoy offered prayer. L. R. Parker gave the address of welcome in behalf of Topeka lodge and the citizens of Hamler.

He spoke of the Alpine hunters and the fidelity with which an aged shepherd at sunset sounded his bugle, after which he would say "Praise ye the Lord." A hunter on another peak caught the sound and blew another blast, repeating the words of praise, and so on from peak to peak, until, like an anthem, it rung out in all the land, thus the meetings of the various lodges from week to week were like the bugle blasts, and the principles taught encircled the earth.

He spoke of the woods as "God's great lodge room," to which all were welcome.

After singing by the choir, Hon. J. V. Cuff, of Napoleon, was to have responded, but not being present, Rev. A. C. Thomas, of Arcadia, was the speaker of the day.

Among the many good things spoken he said: "The foundation principles of Oddfellowship were laid down by the Creator. He spoke of flags and banners being emblems of a country. Yet one could not tell what a country was like from them; neither could one tell by the "three links," their emblem, much about Oddfellowship, but as in unity there is strength, so with unity in work, or purpose there was power, that the way to perpetuate the fraternity was in carrying out the principles of brotherly love; that is educated and built up to a higher life all who became interested, and as they went on from year to year, they were coming nearer to what God required. Not that he would place Odd Fellowship first, for that was secondary, but in other words that God might be served more.

At the close of the address there was more singing and music, then the dinner hour was announced, and in going groups the crowd scattered with well-filled baskets.

At the opening of the afternoon session the following officers were elected for the coming year: President, T. C. Clewell, Napoleon; Secretary, S. J. Powell, Napoleon; treasurer, A. J. Ullrich, Napoleon; with a vice-president from each lodge in the county.

The Rev. Dilenoy made a short address and with more singing and music by the band the meeting adjourned to meet at Napoleon next year.

There were people present from Continental, Leipsic, Holgate, Deshler, Malinta, McClure, Napoleon, Liberty Center, Texas, Milton Center, Weston, Wauseon, Toledo and Wayandotte, Mich.

Republican attitude on the Force bill: "—sh! whist! Keep still till we get there."

President Harrison, consulting Mr. Platt about his letter of acceptance, is one of the "features" of the campaign.

Commissioner Peck says Senator Hill had nothing to do with his report, and Senator Hill has nothing to say about it, either.

While you are hurrahing, just hurrah for Nancy, surnamed Hanks—2:05 1-4. This is the age when the feminine gender gets there.

A dip into the biography shows that no member of the American house of lords was born west of the Missouri river. The great west is jubilant over the honor.

In Persia and other oriental countries the doors of the drink shops are the first to be closed when a cholera or other epidemic threatens. There is yet wisdom to be learned from the Pagans.

The exigencies of politics develop some extraordinary terms of expression. The "anti-snappers" is an exceedingly undignified title for the great body of New York democracy, but there seems to be no help for it.

The Hon Warner Miller is still outside the breastworks where he fell on that memorable occasion. The president had to hustle back to Washington to confront the cholera scare and was so "deprived of the pleasure," etc.

Rt. Hon. Lord Playfair and Lady Playfair were among the passengers who arrived yesterday on the Teutonic. About this time look out for the New York snobs to disport themselves.

There is no possible check to be put upon the newspaper adjective slinger, however heinous his offense. To New York's health officer, the Recorder sends greeting: "It is a magnificent duty that rests on you, Dr. Jenkins."

Gov. McKinley goes on enumerating the necessities of living that are made cheaper by his wonderful law. He includes fuel just the same as if it were not jumping up twenty-five cents per ton every few days and twenty other things that every householder knows the truth about. The governor's reasons for refusing to discuss the tariff with any opponent are plainly in sight.

The old adage, no loss without some gain, is applicable, even in so serious a thing as the cholera scare in this country. It moves our indifferent people to set their streets and alleys in order and to investigate plague spots, the existence of which should be known without any such prodding. It also gives the newspaper makers and readers a little change from the political clatter.

General Bidwell made one of the best tariff reform speeches of recent record the other day. The sentiments of the people's party advocates are usually all in favor of tariff revision and taxation for revenue only. Thus it is shown already that, disunited on other issues, the enemies of republican tariff legislation are in the majority, by a great number, and united, would down this creation of favored monopolies, this foe of the common people.

Mr. Carnegie is, advisably, very quiet. The toot of the silver horn from the top of his Highland coach as he bowls merrily from Cluny Castle to his hunting preserves, echoes not along the deep-sea cable, to stir the patriotism of his American admirers! Even the Glasgow workingmen's societies dubbed him the Judas Iscariot of his time. He bids fair to become, virtually, Hale's "man without a country." His plan to get into Great Britain's parliament house has no promise of speedy fulfilment.

Now that the "Only Young Man's Page" has appeared in a metropolitan newspaper, let the "Woman's page" fade away. Women read the newspaper now-a-days for news, politics and criticism. If they want to learn how to crochet a wool jacket for a baby, they know a score of ways for finding out about it. The young man's page aforesaid, consists thus far, chiefly of cigars, smoking jackets and advice to athletes. If it is conducted to meet the daily needs of the New York dude, the young women of the metropolis may get some excellent pointers.

Customs house collections for the month of August amounted to $1,000,000. According to republican argument this is the sum foreigners are pouring into our coffers for the privilege of trading with us. Looks somewhat fishy, doesn't it? but Gov. McKinley says it is true, and chuckles that "we won't pay tax for the support of the government so long as we can make other nations do it for us." In the light of this declaration, a drawback, paid the manufacturer, on exports, is quite wrongly applied. The foreigner who paid the tax should be awarded the drawback or none should be allowed.

To-day at noon the funeral and burial of George William Curtis took place, conducted by the pastor of the Unitarian church in Brooklyn, where he was accustomed to attend. There has been no crape or funeral wreath on the door of his house. The services were strictly private, attended only by the immediate relatives and friends and three carriages conveyed them to the Moravian cemetery at New Dorp, where the interment took place. Of Mr. Curtis it has been said:

He was an American of Americans, and in his well spent, useful, luminous life it is hard to find a single blemish. He possessed that rarest of good gifts, character, and he never left it at home when he went abroad or lost it when it was needful to him.

THE DRAWBACK SCHEME.

The manufacturer fixes the price of his goods to correspond with the cost of his material, and jobbers and consumers buy subject to the tax levied. The "drawback" he puts in his pocket with a smile. This bonus enables him to meet competition in free trade markets and sell at lower figures to the hated Briton than his own countrymen are compelled to pay. To study the drawback scheme is to understand how wide and fertile a field for fraud it opens to the greedy manufacturer.

UNFAIR ARGUMENT.

District Attorney Knowlton, in his argument for the government at the close of the examination of Lizzie Borden, made some very unwarranted assertions. What occult knowledge does he possess to lead him to say that the death dealing blows "were struck by a weak, irresolute, imperfect, feminine hand that only knew the impulse to strike. * * This thing was conceived by a cool-headed, deliberate woman." The declarations are contradictory in themselves. And in what particular would the blow struck by an "imperfect feminine hand" differ from one struck by a nervous masculine hand however "perfect" it might be? And as to the conception of the murder showing positive signs of being the deed of "a cool-headed woman," in what particular does it differ from murders planned and executed every day by "cool-headed and deliberate" men. Pity that any woman under any circumstances should be placed at the mercy of so stupid an officer. His attempt to create prejudice will react, which movement will also hinder an impartial judgment, from the public. For, while a jury of hopefully "twelve good men and true" will decide as to guilt or innocence, the great jury of the public opinion behind it fills the atmosphere of thought.

THE AUTUMN TOURIST.

The autumn tourist is growing in fashion. A good many persons are coming to understand that the coolest, most restful and healthful place in the heat of the summer is likely to be one's own convenient, well-ordered home. And the delightful season for journeying for rest and recuperation is in the pleasant autumn weather, when one doesn't pant and perspire with every exertion and expend the nervous energy trying to find a habitable and comfortable place. There is zest in the cooler air, laden with the odor of ripening fruit. There's a sense of leisure in nature herself. The year's urgent work is virtually done. The earth may rest while the sun puts the finishing tint of color to the lovely forms she has created. The fervent skies are less brilliant but the flowers are the gayest of them all in their oriental hues. Ah, nature is a great artist. She surrounds us with the most delicate harmonies of color and texture, and we go blundering in the midst, unconscious of design or intelligence or kindship. She doesn't place sun-dials in the soft green sward of the spring-time meadows, or violets in the midst of seeding grasses. There's a time for roses and a time for asters, when each blends with the conditions of light, earth and air that surround them—even with the moods of human kind.

There are those whose work makes it imperative that their vacation days shall come in midsummer. They must seek the cool nooks and shady haunts in the sweltering days, or go not at all. But for those who possess delightful home surroundings, the loveliest time for touring is in September and October, when the outdoor air is an inspiration, when exercise is a pleasure and tramping gives a zest to appetite that all the gold of a Gould or the iron product of a Carnegie cannot buy. It is pitiful to think how much we miss in life that is easily within our reach.

WONDERFUL INCREASE.

Toledo National Banks Make a Report

In Accordance With the Recent Laws That Shows Up Remarkably Well for Toledo.

Toledo is settled evidently on the high road to prosperity. By the subjoined report it will be seen what a wonderful progress Toledo is making as a financial center.

The National banks of the country have received from the comptroller of the treasury a circular letter from which the following self-explanatory extract is taken:

fiG-Bvjy.l.ysitgz: jSGwSgl1r hrdlu hrrr

In view of the fact that this bureau has recently been called upon by the secretary of the treasury, in accordance with senate resolution of July 26, for certain specific banking statistics, and as it is in constant receipt of requests from members of congress, government officials, students of finance, bankers, etc., for statistical and other information in respect to the operations of National banks, it is my desire to be able to comply with all such applications not involving an unreasonable amount of time and labor on the part of bank officers, from whom the original data must be secured.

Under authority conferred upon the comptroller of the currency by section 5211 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, I respectfully call upon you to favor me, at your early convenience (not later than September 1), with a statement, on the inclosed blank, No. 480, showing the amount of exchange drawn by your association on National and other banks in New York, Chicago, St. Louis, etc., together with the commission charged, during the year ended June 30, 1892. This information is specially desired in order that comparisons may be made with similar returns for the years ended on June 30 in 1890 and 1891, in respect to the aggregate amount of exchange drawn, the proportion drawn upon banks in the principal financial centers, and the cost to the public for such accommodations.

The Toledo National banks have all sent in their reports and the increase over a year ago ranges from 25 to 65 per cent.

Following is the report as far as securable.:

First National	$14,800,000
Merchants' National	9,500,000
Ketchum National	5,000,000
Second National	24,700,000
Northern National	13,600,000
	$67,600,000

Mr. Holcomb refused to furnish the aggregate report, but it is safe to place it up high in the scale.

This does not include the savings banks and banks say that $20,000,000 could well be added to the sum total.

The comptroller's circular further says: It is also desired to secure data in respect to the proportions of business transacted by the use of checks, drafts, and bank certificates of deposit, respectively. To this end I shall thank you to keep a correct account of the receipts of your bank on Thursday, September 15, 1892, and to report the result, immediately thereafter, to this office, segregating the various items as scheduled in the inclosed blank, No. 466. Should your receipts contain items not listed in the blank form, kindly designate their character and insert the respective amounts in the lines left blank for that purpose.

Palm, the editor, writes of "Corporal Punishment—Is It Degrading," and Dr. Luckey of "The Teacher's Influence in Politics." Each paper is worthy the studious attention of the thoughtful reader. In the "Church at Home and Abroad," the magazine of Presbyterianism, published by order of the General Assembly, is a notable variety of reading. Letters from missionaries in far away countries furnish often-times our most reliable information. The September number is exceptionally good. 1334 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

Scribner's for the current month, is a choice number, in its reading pages and beautiful in illustration. "The Last of the Buffalo," and "The Tilden Trust Library," are two among many papers of value. Octave Thanet's "Stories of a Western Town" are as characteristic in their way as Miss Wilkins' New England pen pictures. Edith Thomas, Lizzie Woodworth Reese, Anna C. Brackett and Anne Reeve Aldrich contribute poems. Miss Aldrich's "Death at Daybreak" possesses a sad interest, inasmuch as it was written by the gifted young woman, or rather, dictated, when she was too weak to write. She died at daybreak (early in June of this year) as she had prophesied. C. F. Lummis tells us about the "Indian Who is Not Poor," and in Edward Everett Hale's "Point of View" are very interesting notes on current topics.

Harper's gives us "Fox-Hunting in Genesee Valley," handsomely illustrated. "Literary Paris," by Theodore Child, with portraits, a poem by Louise Chandler Moulton, a story by Margaret Sydney, and two happy bits of verse by T. B. Aldrich. "Death Masks," a collection, by Laurence Hutton, is worthy special mention for its wierd interest and historic value. The "Easy Chair," made sadly vacant since the issue went to press, will long appeal to the world of readers who listened monthly to its gentle admonitions and wise conclusions, its comforting sermonets and discriminating criticisms.

The Quarterly Register of Current History for August, reviews international affairs, political movements in the countries of the eastern continents and gives necessary space to political affairs in the United States. The Domestic Monthly has a brilliant new cover and no higher compliment can be paid the magazine than to say that its general, fashion and domestic literature is up to its usual high standard. One dollar a year; 853 Broadway, N. Y.

The Ladies' Home Journal fairly confuses one with its plethora and variety of good things and its long array of accomplished contributors. In the September number a prize offer is made of $100 each for the following compositions: best set of waltzes, best piano composition, best ballad, best song, best anthem, best hymn tune. Time open until November 1. The competitors must be residents of the United States and Canada; the judges will be well-known musical experts. ROUBAIX INDUSTRIES.

They Will Not Be Shown at the Fair.

A Combination of Local Circumstances May Keep Out the Exhibit.

Paris, Sept. 2.—It was announced in the papers here recently that the municipal council of Roubaix, the great French center for the manufacture of woolen fabrics, had refused an appropriation requested by the Roubaix chamber of commerce which was to be used for preparing for Chicago a collective exhibit of the Roubaix industries.

The resident commissioner here of the exhibition has been investigating the matter and finds that this action is not directed against the fair, but is due to local difference.

At the spring elections the workingmen's party triumphed, electing their mayor and a majority of the council. They are arrayed against the manufacturers and merchants of the chamber of commerce. Hence this adverse vote. When the mayor was asked to explain this matter he said:

"The socialist municipal council of Roubaix does not see how a world's fair can do any good to the working classes in general."

Mr. W. H. Atwell, the United States commercial agent at Roubaix, says:

"The people here were at first apathetic with regard to the Chicago exposition, but the fear of foreign competition has aroused them to the advisability of competing in the matter of exhibits with England and Germany."

The action of the municipal council is severely blamed by the local press which favors participation at Chicago.

M. Maurice De Vilmorin, who, with his brother, is the leading seedsman of France, and who is secretary of the official French horticultural committee for the Chicago exhibition, recently said to the resident commissioner here: "Mrs. Potter Palmer writes us granting the privilege we had asked of taking charge of the decoration of the parterres around the woman's building. Then we have been given over 2,000 square yards east of the horticultural building. On the whole our French horticulturists expect to have an ample and effective share in the ornamentation of the grounds."

GOLD FOR EUROPE.

New York, Sept. 2.—Messrs. L. Von Hoffman & Co., have ordered $1,000,000 gold coin for shipment to Europe to-morrow. Messrs. Heidelbachs, Eickelheimer & Co., have ordered $500,000 also for shipment to Europe to-morrow.

COUNTY PEDAGOGUES

Are Still Replenishing Their Stores of Knowledge.

How Grammar Should Be Taught —Interesting Educational Talks.

Prof. Coler opened the afternoon session of the institute yesterday, with a talk on the "Use of Memory in Learning History."

He gave the use of the reason in history, and stated that we should gain the conclusions about facts. He also told of a method of teaching history, which he had used with success.

"The Building of a Vocabulary," was taken up by Prof. Brumbaugh.

The vocabulary was defined as "the list of words that we use nonconsciously." The range of vocabulary is much less than we at first suppose. The average child uses only about 250 or 300 words when he enters a public school. The average person uses only about 1,250 words. Shakespeare used 17,000 and Milton used 12,000. No writers have used more.

The vocabulary must be made up of natural words, i. e., words derived from the children themselves and taught thoroughly to them in language lessons.

Various methods were given for gathering words for language work: The arbitrary, the perceptive, opposite, imaginative and analytic being discussed.

President Webb was present at this morning's session and conducted the exercises. Prof. Coler led in prayer, after which Prof. Brumbaugh took up the subject of "Grammar."

Many good thoughts were advanced by the speaker, who said: "No child is old enough to study grammar until he is old enough to analyze thought. He gave a list of picture words, among which were: Curfew, kerchief, tariff, acorn, tantalize, profane, company, news, defined etc., and told of the derivation of their meaning and other interesting facts about them, as an illustration of how grammar can be taught, profitably, without confining oneself strictly to a text book. He took many words from history and pointed out at what time and in what sense they were used.

Here an interesting discussion ensued, in which Mr. Hutchinson, Prof. Brumbaugh, Mr. Pinkerton and others participated.

Prof. Coler followed with a talk upon "School Government." The principal facts presented were as follows: "A knowledge of government in general is necessary. The function of government is the repression of evil and the encouragement of good; the essentials of good government are benevolence, justice, uniformity and definiteness. In the administration of school government, secure the confidence of the pupils; trust the pupils; give them something to do; use requests rather than commands; give reproof privately when possible, and do not inflict punishment immediately after the transgression. Lastly, secure the co-operation of the pupils in making the school what it ought to be."

Mr. Hutchinson followed with a talk on primary geography. He gave principles of teaching the subject as follows:

1. Proceed from the known to the unknown.
2. Illustrate by actual form in nature as far as possible; use pictures when natural forms are inaccessible.
3. Present but one difficulty at a time.
4. Never tell the pupil what he can find out for himself.

The teacher must become a skillful questioner. Following the questions in the book leads to poor, mechanical word teaching.

Teachers should appeal to the imaginations of pupils and rely less on the committing of non-essential facts.

Prof. Hutchinson told of a visit to the Detroit public schools. He spoke first of the training school which has been in existence nine years. Twice a year examinations are held for persons wishing to become teachers. The model schools in which these pupils are trained, are four in number and cover the first four years of school. The work of the school is divided between theory, the study of psychology and the theory and practice of teaching and practice, the observation of the actual school at work and assistance in conducting it.

It is believed that the training girls are doing better work than other teachers of better natural ability who lack the training.

There is an ungraded or "truant" school in the same building, which provides for the incorrigibles and truants from all parts of the city. As fast as reforms are effected, pupils are returned to the school where they belong.

He also stated that "bath rooms, soap, towels, brushes and blacking were at hand to begin the work of reform."

He mentioned that Detroit has 600 teachers and 54 school buildings, several of which he described in detail.

Reading is taught by sentence method, and he give their plan of teaching arithmetic. He also described their methods of teaching grammar, geography, etc. In teaching geography they do not use text books the first year, but bring into the school room as much of the outside world as possible, to make it an attractive and an intelligent subject.

Special attention is paid to physical culture, and special teachers employed to look after its interests.

Mention should be made of the semi-annual system of promotion, which is being met with success.

These are only a few of the excellent thoughts contained in Mr. Hutchinson's paper.

Committees from the respective W. C. T. Unions of the city are in attendance upon the institute this afternoon to listen to Prof. Fish's lecture on "Temperance."

The following committees on resolutions and nomination of officers have been appointed: On resolutions, H. N. Hutchinson, R. C. Van Gorder and Nellie Bowen. On nomination of officers, C. G. Ballou, J. M. Canfield, and Pauline Hirth.

EGAN COMING HOME.

New York, Sept. 2.—The Herald's special from Valparaiso via Galveston says: The United States minister, Patrick Egan, sailed for home last night. The Chilean government intends to establish a quarantine station at Punta Arenas in view of the outbreak of cholera, and all vessels passing through the straits of Magellan will be inspected.

MANAGER TONKIN

Says Something About the Prospects for Gas.

The Northwestern Receiving Hundreds of Applications Daily—All Consumers Will be Able to Keep Warm.

The cold snap of the last few days has served as a little reminder that summer does not last forever, and that the time for artificial heat will soon be upon us.

Speaking of the prospects of gas for the coming winter Manager Tonkin, of the Northwestern, said to a Bee: "We will not have any gas to waste, but expect to be able to give all consumers we contract with all the gas they need."

"Are you making any new contracts?"

"Yes, we are taking on some new consumers, but we are not anxious about this. I will venture to say that there is not an hour in the day but what applications are filed. We will contract with as many as we think we have gas to supply and then quit. We are receiving applications every day from city consumers, and they will be contracted with just the same as others. We expect to be in better shape this winter than ever before."

BROKE UP IN A ROW

W. I. Squire Carries the War to Columbus.

Charges of Irregularities in Handling Funds.

A Red Hot Time at the Meeting of the Heads of the Two Republican Factions.

Columbus, Sept. 2.—A few of the faithful, known as the executive committee of the Ohio republican league, gathered here for a meeting yesterday.

The league officers extended an invitation to Chairman Dick, of the state committee, to be present and the presence of the state officers was also requested. Mr. Dick was on hand, but the officers were conspicuous by their absence.

President Squire of the league presided and several county committeemen of the organization made reports of the progress of the league work. It is a remarkable fact that every one of these gentlemen had something to say about the apathy and lack of enthusiasm among the republican voters and this sentiment was also echoed by the chief inspector of shops and factories, who is secretary of the organization.

The speakers attempted to explain this on the ground that the campaign had not been formally opened. Where and when this offical opening will occur still remains a mooted question, despite the presence of both Chairman Dick and President Squire.

Mr. Dick addressed the league and asked the organization to co-operate with him in the campaign work, but he refrained from mentioning the Woodsdale island meeting, on September 10, which the league says is to be the official opening, while the regular committee declares it is to be nothing of the kind.

Immediately following Mr. Dick's remarks one W. H. Chace addressed the meeting and declared the Woodsdale meeting to be the official opening and said this was with the consent and co-operation of the state committee. His declaration stood unchallenged by the chairman and one can pay his money and take his choice in the matter of selecting the organization under whose auspices the campaign will be opened.

J. E. Peterson, a colored member from Tuscarawas county, had the nerve to say that the republicans would be able to carry that county if they could get the proper assistance from the state committee. This was a direct bid for campaign boodle and several other members also had something to say about "proper assistance."

The question of proper assistance, from the republican standpoint, will be considered in private. In the pending campaign "proper assistance" may prove a companion piece for Chairman Hahn's $6,000 "miscellaneous" expense of last year. About the only real business transacted directly affecting the league was the decision to provide for uniforming certain clubs, the idea being to create a sort of uniform rank.

H. L. Wilhelm, who threatened to unload a grievance before the committee and give a pedigree of some of the officers, did not materialize with his tale of woe, and the promised row from that source did not show up.

It came all the same, however, and the proceedings were characterized by personal accusations and scenes that would have put to shame a band of border ruffians.

Immediately after convening at 2 o'clock the league committee went into executive session, excluding all persons except the members.

The doors were closed against all outsiders. The ball was soon opened, and not content with discussing present differences, the members fought over the last campaign. The particular matter brought up in this connection was over the suspicious handling of the league funds.

The executive session had been in progress only a short time when it was developed that there were two factions—headed respectively by President Squire and Secretary McDonald.

Harry C. Critchfield, of Mt. Vernon, started the ball rolling that came near resulting in pistols and coffee being called for by the two principal officers of the state league—Squire and McDonald.

The motion made by Mr. Critchfield was to increase the campaign committee from seven to twelve members. This was recognized as a neat scheme to give President Squire full control, as he would appoint the five additional members.

Col. W. H. Chace, of Dayton, denounced the motion as a scheme to turn the organization, body and breeches and boodle over to Squire, under whose direction about $15,000 was spent last year, but nobody knows how.

This created a great sensation among the faithful and opened the floodgates of personal abuse.

Secretary McDonald let out a few republican secrets. He indorsed what Chace said, and stated that a quiet personal investigation had been going on and they did not want President Squire's powers enlarged, as irregularities in the management of the funds of the last campaign had been discovered. Bills were paid that would never have been allowed by a regular auditing committee.

J. J. Chester, who served as secretary, attempted to explain that the questionable bills were for wine, good old sherry, for the officers and members to have a good time, but this did not satisfy the McDonald faction.

Innuendoes and base insinuations were hurled back and forth thick and fast, until the McDonald crowd declared that if the Critchfield motion was adopted they would resign from the league. These declarations added to the sensational features of the show, and there were ominous rumblings of fist-cuffs and slugging matches, but the combatants were held apart.

Finally a vote was taken and the McDonald faction won, the resolution being defeated by a vote of 6 yeas to 8 nays. Even after the vote had been taken the trouble did not end. The president and secretary continued to hurl choice epithets at each other, backed by shaking fists.

"If you want to see me," said the secretary to the president, "just come to my office in the state house and I'll be prepared to meet you." The meeting broke up and to avoid a mill in advance of the great Corbett and Sullivan match, the two left the building by different routes. It is understood that the trouble between Messrs. Squire and McDonald firs tor ginated in the belief that the former has succumbed to the seductive influence of the Sherman-McKinley-Foster combination. He was elected to the presidency of the league as a Foraker man, but they now have reason to believe that he has gone politically wrong from their standpoint.

HE FELT SAFE.

The old man had gone over to a neighbor's to find his wandering hens, and he was in such bad humor that his language was, to say the least, not polite.

"Don't swear so," pleaded the neighbor, a pious person, "don't you know curses, like chickens, come home to roost?"

"Well," exclaimed the old man at the end of another string of emphasis, "if they are like my chickens they won't," and he used more language.—Detroit Free Press.

PREMIER ABBOTT.

Montreal, Sept. 2.—Premier Abbott has arrived at St. Anne, his country residence, from his yachting trip down the St. Lawrence for the benefit of his health. He has gained in flesh and is apparently in much better bodily health, but complains of lack of mental force. The least discussion or even ordinary conversation for any length of time, he says, not only fatigues him, but produces extreme weakness.

A correspondent of an English provincial paper, quoted in the Pall Mall Gazette, describes Mr. James Bryce, M. P., as an enthusiastic botanist, and gives the following story as evidence: I have a vivid recollection of how, in wandering over the Cornish cliffs in his company and that of his delightful wife, I was called upon, together with Mrs. Bryce, to hold him by the heels as he stretched over a precipitous cliff to cull the leaf of some interesting specimen plants growing from four to five feet below the edge.

GRAND ARMY REUNIONS

Local Organizations Hold Their Annual Meetings.

The Old Fourteenth Have a Good Time at Waterville.

The Sixty-Seventh Meets at Swanton and the Twenty-Fifth at Genoa—Officers Elected.

Yesterday was a day for Grand Army reunions, and the boys in blue had, as a rule, a royal good time at the various annual meetings yesterday. The Bee gave a brief sketch yesterday of the Fourteenth and Sixty-seventh.

The Fourteenth met at Waterville and elected the following officers: President, David Bowker, Liberty Center; vice president, J. C. Jones, Colton; treasurer, J. B. Newton; secretary, L. E. Clark, Toledo; assistant secretary, Dr. H. Hathaway, Toledo.

At the close of the regular business meeting it was decided to hold the reunion next year at Colton, and Capt. Gunn, of Maumee, was appointed to represent the regiment in the Ohio commission of the Charanooga association. It was also decided to erect a memorial tablet in Memorial hall.

After adjourning the boys had a good old-fashioned time and again fought over the battles of 30 years ago.

Reunion of the Sixty-Seventh.

The number of members who gathered at the seventh annual reunion of the Sixty-seventh Ohio, at Swanton, yesterday, was not so large as anticipated, there only being about 150 present, and nearly 100 of those going from Toledo.

The Lake Shore special arrived at Swanton at 11:15, and the visitors were met by the local reception committee, who escorted them to headquarters, where the meeting was opened by prayer by Rev. Baumgardner, followed by music by the Swanton Glee club. A very eloquent address of welcome was delivered by Mayor Scott, which was responded to in an able speech by Hon. W. H. Handy.

A bountiful dinner was then served, and after it had been partaken of the meeting was again called to order and a business session held, at which the officers for the year were elected as follows: President, W. H. Handy; vice-president, A. G. Daniels; secretary and treasurer, C. D. Lindsay.

The next reunion will be held the first Thursday in September, 1893, at Wauseon. Gen. Voris, of Akron, was orator of the day, and his remarks were very interesting.

M. P. Sanderson was master of ceremonies, and discharged the duties efficiently.

After tendering the good people of Swanton a vote of thanks for their hospitality, the seventeenth reunion was adjourned.

The Twenty-fifth Ohio.

The Twenty-fifth regiment O. L. V held its annual reunion at Genoa, Ohio, yesterday. There were present about one hundred veterans, mostly from Toledo, Napoleon, Maumee, Sylvania, Elgin, Many of the veterans were accompanied by their wives and children. The people of Genoa did everything to make the reunion a grand success. They set tables in the town hall and served all the visitors to a bountiful meal. All those who could not get away until evening were given supper by the towns people.

The next reunion will be held at Pemberville the last Thursday in August, 1893.

Officers were elected as follows: President, Capt. Mattson, Atlanta, Ga.; first vice-president, John A. Church, Maumee; second vice-president, Phil Hazzenthal, Toledo; secretary, O. W. Williams, Norwalk; treasurer, L. W. Geddes, Genoa.

ANOTHER RELAY RACE.

This Time From Washington to Pittsburg.

The Time Expected to be Made in Eleven Hours—Good Weather for the Start.

Washington, Sept. 2.—The relay bicycle race between Washington and Pittsburg, which was postponed about a month ago on account of the labor troubles in western Pennsylvania, will be started this afternoon at 2 o'clock from the capitol.

The race is looked upon in wheeling circles as a greater event than the late relay race between Chicago and New York, for though the distance—300 miles—is shorter, the country to be traversed is much worse, including nine ranges of mountains, several of which will have to crossed at night.

The Washington end of the relay is in the hands of the Washington military cyclists and the message, which is a dispatch from Gen. Ordwal to the Pittsburg Leader, will be carried by the Washington boys as far as Frederick, where they will be met by the members of the Hagerstown club who will cover the distance to Cumberland. Thence the message will be carried by the local clubs to Narrows Park, to Frostburg, to Uniontown, to Brownsville, and into Pittsburg. The time by rail from Washington to Pittsburg is 11 hours and the wheelmen hope if the weather holds good to make the run in twice tat time.

The meeting was opened this morning with a very slim attendance, at Wings' hall, and the doors were at once closed to all outsiders. While there is not much opportunity to get anything from the inside, enough has leaked out to show that the convention to-day has for its object the formation of a union, which will be so strong that the Western Union will not be able to break it down in case of a strike. The new organization will be backed by the whole power of the Knights of Labor, and in case of a strike they will see if the labor organizations can affect such a monopoly as the telegraph companies.

In an interview this morning with Mr. Randall, the instigator of the movement, he said the meeting was a peaceful one and did not have any strike in view, but that if any local trouble arose at any time the operators would be in better condition to help themselves than they were now, and this was the sole object of the meeting, which was for the purpose of bringing all operators closer together. It is evident that the meeting will be so held that nothing will be learned by outsiders except what is wanted to be known.

ARRESTED IN CHICAGO

On Requisition for an Alleged Robbery in Wood County, Ohio.

Chicago, Sept. 2.—Deputy Sheriffs Jones and Hery Biers yesterday made the arrest of Henry Oblinger and turned him over to the sheriff of Wood county, Ohio.

Oblinger was betrayed by a companion and was captured while hiding in a freight car in the Michigan Central yards.

He made a desperate fight and was only subdued by a threat to shoot him.

The Chicago officers made the arrest on two requisitions from Governor McKinley.

Oblinger is wanted on the charge of entering the house of an old couple in Wood county, Ohio, knocking down the man and tearing the clothing from the woman in a search for money, which, it is alleged, he finally found—$1,100 in all—in the bosom of her dress.

This was two years ago and the authorities have been searching for him ever since.

Sheriff Bryant, of Wood county, will take him back to Ohio to-day.

THE LEITZ ESTATE.

The Oregon Township Hermit Leaves a Queer Estate.

Bee Hives, Old Barrels, Scrap Iron and Old Books and Papers Constitute the Personal Property.

Some time ago the Bee printed a story of the life and career of an old hermit named Rudolph Litz, who lived a nondescript life in a hovel, in Oregon township, and whose life and career was not unlike that of Dickens' Quilp in an "Old Curiosity Shop."

Leitz died a few days ago, at the Protestant hospital, having been removed to that institution by the health officers. He was living in awful squalor and the people living in that vicinity made complaint.

Over 20 years ago Leitz resolved never to wash, shave or cut his hair, and the nurses at the hospital, as well as the health officers, can testify as to how well he lived up to his strange vow.

Leitz also had a mania for buying old second-hand plunder. He would buy anything, from a tin whistle to a threshing machine, and old barrels always brought a premium. The grounds around his little house were literally covered with this kind of truck, and he had no more use for it than he had for water.

The probate court recently appointed Charles A. Boake, George J. Williston, and M. Loenshal as appraisers of the estate. They filed a report of the personal property this morning, as follows:

47 hives of bees	$ 94

GOSLINE AND DODGE

Win the Championship in Doubles.

Will Gosline Wins the Singles and Will Play the Championship Game This Afternoon.

Will Gosline, of Toledo, gets there.

He beats Cincinnati's crack player and eight others in gentlemen's singles.

The most exciting game of the tournament occurred yesterday afternoon. Gosline won the first set after a long, hard fight. Sixteen games were played before the set was decided.

Gosline won the first game of the set. It was a tie at the end of the second, fourth, sixth, eighth, tenth, and thirteenth games. They were six all at the end of the thirteenth, when Gosline won two straights and the set, score 8-6.

Hollister won the next set in eight games, score 6-2.

Gosline captured the third set in ten games. They were tie in the sixth and eighth games. Gosline took the ninth and tenth, winning the set, score 6-4.

The fourth set gave Gosline the game and the match. The score for the successive games in the set were as follows:

Gosline	1	1	2	3	3	4	4	5	5	6
Hollister	0	1	1	1	2	2	3	3	4	4

There was prolonged cheering when the game was finished. Gosline played a strong, steady game and placed his balls well. While Toledoans hoped Gosline might beat Hollister, they did not expect that he would. He may, however, meet his Waterloo in Beckwith.

This morning the Coldham brothers and Gosline and Dodge started in on the final round of gentlemen's doubles. Gosline and Dodge won the first set, 6-4, and the second as well to the tune of 8-6. The second set was quite exciting. They seesawed back and forth for it was a deuce set, and Gosline and Dodge only won in the twelfth and thirteenth games after a hard fight.

The Coldhams won the third set in short order, score 6-4.

Gosline and Dodge captured the fourth set, score, 6-4, winning the game and the state championship in doubles.

This afternoon Gosline plays the championship game with T. S. Beckwith.

There was dancing, music and refreshments at the club last evening. The visitors are highly pleased with the reception they received in Toledo.

Augusta, Me., Sept. 2.—Senator Hale states to a newspaper man that Mr. Blaine will make no speeches during the campaign, but is now engaged in writing a letter that was likely to appear any day, which he devoted to some of the issues which are being discussed and in which he takes a deep interest.

THE WAY IT WORKS.

I came, I saw, I pressed her hand;
I begged her for a kiss.
She blushed, looked down—I stole the prize,
It was a dream of bliss.
I've wakened from my dream since then—
That kiss has cost me dear,
I'm paying alimony now
For it twelve times a year.

The anti-pork people say that the eating of pork is the fruitful cause of scrofulous diseases, not to speak of the deadly trichina. But an eminent physician declares that of all the races in the world, the North American Indians are the most afflicted with scrofula, though they eat very little pork.

The Chinese have an elaborate system for the interpretation of dreams. To be whipped by a god or devil they regard as extremely unlucky, while to enter a temple, and see the gods moving about, is considered lucky. To dream of fighting with wandering ghosts means that one will live to an old age.

Mrs. E. J. Nicholson, of Philadelphia, has in her possession a piece of silk which was part of the court dress worn by Lady Falkland, the daughter of George IV. The silk, though faded by years, is of marvelous texture, and was manufactured by special order of the king for Lady Falkland to wear on grand state ceremonials.

An experiment is about to be made in Maine to see whether mutton sheep cannot be raised in that state with profit. Several abandoned farms that adjoin each other have been secured and will be put in condition to receive a flock of sheep that will be reared chiefly for the mutton, although the wool will be an important part of the product also.

Those queerly constituted persons who imagine they have a respect for the memory of deceased persons whose tombs they despoil have already carried away every portable object from the burial place of Walt Whitman and chipped chunks from the granite walls. The marvelously sweet song of the hermit thrush is heard at this season in such bits of woodland in Westchester county, New York, as have been spared by the growth of population. The shy songster is seldom seen, but his clear, thrilling notes, inimitable by the human throat, and having a curiously sweet yet metallic tone, are carried for hundreds of yards through the woodland.

At Martin, Tenn., while charging his soda fount, J. Lavender made a narrow escape from a terrible death. A carboy, filled with 23 gallons of sulphuric acid, suddenly burst, and he was bathed in a fiery fluid. Fortunately he was not badly burned on account of the rapidity with which he disrobed. He says it took him just one second to get out of everything he had on, which were literally burned to pieces by the fiery acid.

The whole civilized world, outside of Spain, is abundantly supplied with the soaps named after Castile, which is in Spain. Yet in Barcelona, one of the largest and most progressive Spanish cities, an American artist at a small hotel, or posada, created a sensation recently by asking for soap to use with his small allowance of water in removing from his face and hands the grime of a long journey by rail.

At the costermongers' donkey and pony show in the People's Palace, London, Mr. H. M. Stanley said that he had been enabled to pass through a savage district in Africa half as large as England by means of a donkey named Mirambo, that used to bray in a most stentorian manner at the word of command, and frighten all the natives; and when the expedition left Africa, homeward bound, the last thing they saw was the donkey perched on a cliff braying a sad farewell.

The licorice trade is not what it used to be. A few years ago a druggist and confectioner made lots of money out of stick licorice, licorice root, licorice lozenges, pellets and wafers. Every boy and girl had to have licorice, and their fathers seemed to think that the stuff was good for the little ones, and gladly gave them nickels with which to buy it. The cheapness of good candies has killed the licorice trade. Gum drops are also a relic of the past.

The Essex institute and museum, of Salem, Mass., is stored with treasures in the shape of models of naval architecture and valuable paintings of noted vessels and yachts, ocean duels, marine views and various articles of historic interest. The curator of the institute is planning to prepare for exhibition at the world's fair water-color or pastel paintings of originals of Salem vessels from 1765 down to the present time; also photographs from the academy and institute of such articles in their collections as would be of interest, having them enlarged to such size as may be found suitable.

A PIECE OF STRING.

A vast throng filled the market-place of Goderville, a surging multitude of men and animals. The horns of the cattle, the rough-napped, high hats of the rich peasants and the head-dresses of the women rocked together on the surface of that sea. Voices harsh and clamorous made a shrill and savage din. Now and again above it all a mighty roar of laughter would burst from the lungs of some rustic, mingled with the long bellow of a cow tied fast to the wall of a house.

Maitre Hauchecorne of Breaute had just arrived at Goderville and was making his way towards the market-place, when he saw on the gounds a little piece of string. Maitre Hauchecorne, saving like every true woman, reflected that everything was worth picking up which could be made useful, and he stooped down and took the thin piece of string from the ground, and was just putting it in his pocket when he perceived Maitre Malandain standing on his doorstep and looking at him.

They had once had a quarrel about a halter, and they had remained angry, bearing malice on both sides. Maitre Hauchecorne was overcome with an embarrassment at being seen by his old enemy searching the dust for a scrap of string. He quickly hid his find under his blouse, then in his pocket, then pretended to look for something on the ground, and at last started for the market-place, with his head bent forward and a body almost doubled in two by rheumatic pains.

Slowly the square became empty, and when the Angelus struck at mid-day those who lived at a distance poured into the inns.

At Jourdain's the great room was filled with eaters.

Suddenly a drum sounded before the house. Every one, except the most indifferent, sprang to his feet and ran to the door, to the windows, his mouth still full and his napkin in hand.

When the public crier had finished his tattoo he called forth in a jerky voice, making his pauses out of time:

"Be it known to the inhabitants of Goderville, and in general to all—persons present at the market, that there has been lost this morning on the Beuzeville road, between—9 and 10 o'clock, a purse of black leather containing 500 francs and business papers. You are requested to return it to the mayor's office at once."

They were finishing their coffee when the corporal of gendarmes appeared on the threshold. He said:

"Maitre Hauchecorne, will you come with me to the mayor's office? M. le Maire would like to speak with you."

Maitre Hauchecorne followed the corporal.

The mayor was waiting in an armchair.

"Maitre Hauchecorne," said he, "this morning, on the Beuzeville road, you were seen to pick up the pocket-book lost by Maitre Houlbreque, of Manneville."

The peasant, speechless, regarded the mayor, frightened already by this suspicion which rested on him, he knew not why.

"I, I picked up that pocket-book?"

"Yes, you."

"I swear I know nothing about it."

"You were seen."

"They saw me. Who saw me?"

"M. Malandain, the harness-maker."

Then the old man understood and grew scarlet with anger.

The mayor continued: "After having picked up the purse you even looked in the dirt to see if some money had not fallen out."

The good man was choked with anger and fear:

"If they can say!—if they can say * * such lies as that to slander an honest man! If they can say!"——

He might protest, he was not believed.

The news spread. When he left the mayor's office the old man was surrounded, questioned with curiosity, which was serious or mocking as the case might be. And he told about the string. They did not believe him.

They said to him: "You old rascal, you."

That evening he made the round in the village of Breaute, so as to tell every one. He met only unbelievers.

He was ill all night.

Next day, about 1 in the afternoon, Marius Paumelle, a farm hand at Maitre Breton, the market gardner at Ymauville, returned the purse and its contents.

This man, said, indeed, that he had found it on the road; but, not knowing how to read, he had carried it home and given it to his master.

The news spread. Maitre Hauchecorne at once began to tell his story as completed by the climax.

"What grieved me," said he, "was not the thing itself, but the lies. Nothing does one so much harm as disgrace for lying."

All day he talked of what had happened. He told it on the roads to the people who passed; at the cabaret to the people who drank, and the next Sunday when they came to church.

On the following Tuesday he went to Goderville for the purpose of telling his story. When seated at a table in Jourdain's tavern he began to tell the whole affair over again.

A horse dealer shouted at him: "Go away, you old scamp. I know all about your string."

Hauchecorne stammered: "But they found the purse again, I tell you."

The other answered: "There's one who pinch it and another who return it and none the wiser."

Now the peasant understood. They accused him of having had the purse returned by an accomplice.

He went home choked with rage, with confusion, the more depressed since from his Norman cunning he was, perhaps, capable of having done what they accused him of and even of boasting of it as a good trick.

Then he began again to tell of his adventure, lengthening his recital every day, each time adding new proofs. The more complicated his defense, the more artful his arguments, the less he was believed.

"Those are liars' proofs," they said behind his back.

He felt this; it preyed upon his heart. He exhausted himself in useless efforts. He was visibly wasting away.

About the end of December he took to his bed.

He died early in January, and, in the delirium of his death-agony, he protested his innocence, repeating:

"A little bit of string—a little bit of string—see, here it is, M'sieu' le Maire.—From the French of Guy de Maupassant.

THE WOMAN NOVELIST.

Most ladies prefer to read a novel written by a woman, because she always pays particular attention to the dress of her heroine. A man will send his heroine on a long journey without changing her dress, although she may have just come in from a horseback ride. Dress to a woman is part of her personality, and every shade of feeling and every new situation must have a dress to correspond.—Birmingham Age-Herald.

NOT ONE.

"You say you were once a newspaper man?" inquired the kind old lady.

"Yes'm," said the sad-eyed tourist at the kitchen door. "I once had a responsible position on a big daily paper."

"Then haven't you some newspaper friends that could help you?"

"Friends?" bitterly replied the wanderer. "No, ma'am. I was a copy reader."—Chicago Tribune.

Some five or six years ago, Mr. J. R. Parsons, a practical jeweler of La Porte, Ind., became convinced that it would be both philanthropic and profitable to establish a college where young men and women could learn the jeweler's and watchmaker's trade under a competent teacher. He began in a small way, but each year the attendance increased, until now Parsons' Horological school is a great success, and so well known that jewelers needing help send for the graduates from that institution.

NOT IN IT.

Society People and Some Who Think It a Fraud.

Every community now has a goodly number of these social dissenters—men and women who are "not in society," and who are neither pained nor shamed by the fact, but rather avow it with the complaisance of clever people who have found out a fraud. These social dissenters are by no means from the unknown or unimportant classes. They are usually people of distinction, who live well, dress fashionably, pay their bills, are blameless in character, courteous, hospitable and with no taint of cynicism in their nature; yet they "save themselves" from their fellows and, without explanations or regrets, refuse to add one more to the hundreds of persons leading a life that has no attraction for them. But, as a rule, there are few conditions in life which are not many-sided and capable of being defended on every side.

And we must first notice that social secessionists are expecting society to be what society never purposes or wishes to be, and that, therefore, they might as justly complain that a man is a hedger or ditcher when he might be a poet or a preacher. Society never yet set itself to be good or great. It has no higher mission than to promote social pleasure and order, and the qualifications it requires are not piety or intellect, but the ability to dress well, to say a great deal about nothing, to lead a dance, to keep every title of the rigid traditional law of uniformities, and in all disputed questions, or doubtful positions, to intimate that truly great and wise man, the Levite, rather than the officious, demonstrative Samaritan. We must, of course, admit that this is a low moral and intellectual plane, but it is a plane which satisfies the aspirations and capabilities of the majority who tarry there, and all things in life are not equally happy and justifiable.—North American Review.

Don't buy a blood purifier because it is "cheap." The best—the Superior Medicine—Ayer's Sarsaparilla, is, in the end, the cheapest blood purifier in the market. The ingredients of which it is composed are the most expensive and medicinally efficacious that can be obtained.

THE MOST USEFUL MINERAL

Ice Is of More Benefit to Mankind Than Either Salt or Iron.

"If one were to ask his friends what mineral we are most familiar with and most commonly used as food, the answers would probably be both varied and amusing. Salt would, I fancy, first suggest itself to many, and to those whose training in physiology and hygiene has not been neglected, no doubt the claims of lime and iron and carbon, which, in one form or another, we use with food to build up bone and brawn, would be simply urged. But, after all, it is water, for water is a mineral—a fused mineral," says a writer in Harper's Magazine. "You will find it described as such, along with quartz and topaz and the diamond, in Dana's Mineralogy, or in other treatises on stones.

"We usually think of minerals as solid things, such as metals and rocks and jewels and various chemical salts. But when we consider the matter a little we see that all these things if melted by strong heat are minerals still, only they are now in a fluid instead of in a solid state. The difference between these minerals and water is that water gets fluid at a lower temperature than they do, and, like quicksilver, stays melted at ordinary living heat. But in those old ages which, one after another, have swept now over the northern and now over the southern hemisphere, bringing ruin and desolation, the natural and common condition of water was that of a solid—ice—as it largely is to-day out-of-doors in winter when not kept fused by the stored-up heat of the soil and rocks, or melted by the sun.

Don't You Know

that you can secure almost immediate relief from Indigestion, and that uncomfortable fullness after meals, by simply taking a dose of Simmons Liver Regulator? Some people think that because it is called Liver Regulator it has nothing to do with Indigestion and the like. It is the inaction of the Liver that causes Indigestion, and that fullness; also Constipation, and those Bilious Headaches. Millions have been made to understand this and have been cured from these troubles by Simmons Liver Regulator—a medicine unfailing and purely vegetable.

From Rev. M. B. Wharton, Baltimore, Md

"It affords me pleasure to add my testimony to the great virtues of Simmons Liver Regulator. I have had experience with it, as occasion demanded, for many years, and regard it as the greatest medicine of the times. So good a medicine deserves universal commendation.

Advice to Mothers of Fretful Babies

828 Huron St., Toledo, O., July 17, '92.

Hand Medicine Co., Gentlemen:

My baby is now three months old and has had colic all her life. We gave her all kinds of remedies without any beneficial effect. I was almost discouraged in trying anything else when a friend told me of your Dr. Hand's Colic Cure. I gave her 12 drops which acted like a charm. Now as soon as I discover she has wind colic I give her one or two doses which relieves her entirely. I want to advise all mothers who have fretful babies to use Dr. Hand's Colic Cure. I will hereafter always keep it in the house.

MANY VICTIMS.

Cholera Infantum's Death Record.

A Serious Time for Little Babies.

Physicians Advise the Use of Pure Food.

Lack of Proper Knowledge Causes Suffering.

How the Health of Children May Be Preserved.

Mothers of Toledo, read what's here.

There is an epidemic of indigestion and cholera infantum in this and other states.

Health boards everywhere are reporting a startling fatality from cholera infantum.

Physicians say that in nearly every case the child is poorly fed and nourished, and hence the disease.

"It is absolutely certain," says a physician in one of the medical journals, speaking of the alarming summer mortality among his patients, "that the cause of this high death rate among infants is indigestion."

At the beginning of summer, the best physicians gave warning that pure food must be used for babies. That this warning did not reach every city and town in this state is evident from the high infantile death rate. But in those places where the newspapers published the discussions that were going on, large quantities of lactated food were sold and this best of diets for children was used. The result is, statistics show that fewer deaths have occurred in those towns and cities where the larger amount of lactated food was used.

Comparisons of this sort are absolutely convincing.

September is a fatal month for the little ones, and unless lactated food is used, the local physicians say that the dreadful mortality and increasing amount of sickness among children will continue.

The one safe plan is to feed infants on lactated food.

CAUSES OF COLOR BLINDNESS

The Smoking of Tobacco Proven to be Detrimental to the Eyesight.

The parliamentary committee appointed in Great Britain to examine the subject of color blindness, particularly in its relation to marine and railway signaling, have made an exceedingly interesting report. They find that in the male population nearly 4 per cent are either partially or wholly deficient in the ability to distinguish rightly the primary colors of the spectrum. The tests were made with great care, under the guidance of specialists whose scientific knowledge afforded a guarantee of accurate and trustworthy investigation, says the Philadelphia Record.

Because Berlin wool presents to the eye a rough and non-reflecting surface, the colors of which are not heightened nor dulled by the light in which it is displayed, that substance was selected for testing the eyes. From a miscellaneous heap of skeins of various colors the person submitting to a test was required to select approximate matches for certain test colors. It was found that blindness to red was the most common form of deficiency; blindness to green was the next in frequency. Since experiment has proven that red and green are the two colors found to be most trustworthy for signaling purposes, on account of their superior luminosity and their visibility at considerable distances, the fact that these are the two colors which color-blind persons are most apt to mistake is a matter of the first importance.

The committee found that the persons in responsible positions in the marine and railway service, where accuracy in determining color is essential to safety and efficiency, could not be trusted to read the signals correctly. This condition of things possibly furnishes the explanation of many disasters on sea and land which have hitherto been deemed mysterious; and it certainly indicates the necessity for a thorough test of the eyes of engineers, pilots, signalmen and others who are intrusted with the movement of trains and of water craft.

As to the causes of color blindness, the committee report that in the greater number of instances it proceeds from congenial defects that cannot be remedied; but it is frequently the result of excessive use of tobacco. This is a hint worth remembering on the part of those who may become aware of their inability to distinguish colors.

As every day in the year thousands of lives and millions of dollars' worth of property are dependent for safe keeping upon the accurate reading of colors by persons employed upon steamers, ships and locomotives, the knowledge of the risk involved should lead to thorough examination and the weeding out of those found in this particular to have defective eyesight.

ARISTOCRACY AND GOOD LOOKS

The Gods of the Heathen Are Ugly, But Nevertheless Great.

As a matter of fact there is scarcely any connection between the aristocracy, even democratic aristocracy, and a good profile, says T. V. Higginson in Harper's Bazar. The more complete the system of caste the more absolutely it is disseverd from anything relating to external appearance. The social inferior looks up to the superior as one of Dickens' "reverential wives" looks up to her husband, with a reverence not impaired by any homeliness of features.

Rufus Choate said of Chief Justice Shaw, of Massachusetts, who was one of the plainest of men: "I feel toward him as the South Sea islander feels toward his idol; he sees that he is ugly, but he knows that he is great." The most striking case, perhaps, of this complete reversal of judgment under the influence of caste is to be found in those two tribes described by the author of "Two Happy Years in Ceylon," the Rock Veddahs and the Rodiyas. The Rock Veddahs are stunted, hideous and filthy; they live in secluded caves and holes; they eat bats and rats and make their scanty clothing from the bark of trees; but the Singhalese regard them as of the very highest caste, and it would be no disgrace for a woman of good social position to marry a Rock Veddah.

On the other hand the very greatest disgrace that could be inflicted on such a woman would be to marry her to a Rodiya, although these last are a race distinguished for beauty, at least in youth, and gentle and innocent by nature. The Rodiyas cannot enter a temple or a village; they are forbidden to till the soil or draw water from a well; they cannot build a house or divide a burden into two bundles; their shadow must not fall on a stream, lest it be polluted; no member of another caste may touch them without disgrace; yet any one may shoot them without blame. All this is supposed to be in consequence of the act of an ancestor 2,000 years ago, who inveigled a king into eating human flesh. As a consequence the beautiful race is at the foot of the social scale, the ugly and repulsive at the top.

TOO PARTICULAR.

Nobody in the world is as particular about what he eats as a New York coachman, as the following dialogue shows:

Coachman—Look here, cook, if you give me any more such victuals I'll go to a hotel and eat my meals. I am not going to put up with it.

"What's the matter?"

"You needn't make out that you don't know what's the matter. You just own up that you have given me asparagus that is almost tough enough to put on the table upstairs."—Texas Siftings.

SHE WAS FROM ST. LOUIS.

She was a St. Louis girl, and was riding in a horse car in Chicago. As she passed up the car her escort noticed a fierce scowl on the face of a girl who was seated near the door.

"Did you step on that girl's foot?" he inquired.

"Yes," she replied sweetly. "I believe I did; on a little of it."—Washington Star.

SLEEP.

When to soft sleep we give ourselves away,
And in a dream, as in a fairy bark,
Drift on through the enchanted dark
To purple daybreak—little thought we pay
To the sweet bitter world we know by day.
We are clean quit of it, as is the lark
So high in heaven no human eye can mark
The thin, swift pinion cleaving through the gray,
Till we awake, ill fate can do no ill;
The resting heart shall not take up again
The heavy load that yet shall make it bleed,
For this brief space the loud world's voice is still;
No faintest echo of it brings us pain.
How will it be when we shall sleep indeed?

—T. B. Aldrich.

LOOSHA'S LOVER.

Loosha's disposition is not of the soft and melting kind; her demeanor toward the sterner sex is uniformly sharp, incisive and superior. She has no patience with the men, she is wont to say—their ways are such. Yet she possess swarms of followers. The lives of the most audacious wooers turn to water at her frown. Her cousin Dave was a full private in the Foot Guards, and a steady-going soldier enough, though there were times when, as his aunt, Mrs. Hemmans, said, "his spirits got the best of him." Whether the article in question was native, Irish, or Scotch, she did not explain—perhaps because, throughout the duration of that thirsty madness, to recurrent attacks of which the young defender of his country was subject, he would cheerfully avail himself of any beverage that came in his way, provided it possessed the simple qualification of burning in the gullet as it went down and getting into the head afterward. It was while under the influence of some such potable that Private Hemmans conceived and executed that project of desertion from his regiment which heaped upon his family irretrievable disgrace.

The recreant was sought, officially and formally, without success. It was surmised that he had left the county—that he had been waylaid and murdered, even; but this theory Loosha indignantly refused to accept. A young fellow who could bend a kitchen poker on the muscles of his forearm and bite a neat semi-circle out of a pewter pot was not, Loosha averred, to be kidnapped and "balooted" (by which we will presume she meant garroted). Let others abandon hope who would. Something told Loosha that Dave was only lying low, and that she should set her eyes on him yet. It may be mentioned that Loosha's eye is not to be joked about. It possesses gimlet-like attributes of boring through mysteries. She is conscious of its power, and boasts of it. She did not underrate its abilities in the case of Dave. It pounced on him falcon-wise, and singled him out from among a knot of loafers at the bar of a shady public house. There was Dave, basely oblivious of his queen, his country, and his cousin, arrayed in kaleidoscopic attire, and gloomily standing drinks all round.

"To a pretty lot!" as Loosha said afterward: "most of 'em lookin' as if they'd dossed in their clothes for months past, and done with a dry polish by way of washin'. As for Dave, I should a considered my kitchen tongs defiled with his contack. His uniform clothes was gone, an' he'd a pair o' velveteen kickshers on as must a belonged to a railway wheel-tapper out o' luck as had smothered himself in his own grease pot. An' he'd a shoddy tweed jacket out at elbers, buttoned up tight to 'ide 'is army rasper, an' an old Scotch cap. 'E was lookin' 'angdog enough when just I clapped my eye on 'im, but when I calmly bounced in an' stood before 'im like a revengin' angel, cheap was not the word for what that fellow felt. I b'lieve if he could a shrunk up small enough to 'ide in a spittoon he'd a done it."

"'Good afternoon, Private Hemmans,' I says, throwing 'im a sneer. 'You're 'avin', an enjoyable furlough, ain't you?'

"'Furlough be busted,' sezee, seein' that there was nothin' for it but to bounce. 'I've cut the old gal's service, and I'm a free man. Not a bloomin' white nigger pipeclayin' belts on a shillin' a day and blowin' myself out on chaff bread and cheap taters, cow cabbage and lied beef to the tune that the old 'orse died of. If every 'orse as 'as been conshumed by the reg'ment since it was a reg'ment,' 'e says, 'was to drag me, I ain't a goin' back. Blow on me if you like,' sezee, 'but I know you 'aven't the 'art to do it.'

"'I ain't goin' to blow on you,' I says, fixin' him with my eye. 'You're a-goin' to blow on yourself.'

"'Wot words are these, Loosha Hemmans?' sezee.

"'Simpularly,' says I, 'that you're a-goin' to come along with me, now directly minute, to barracks, and give yourself up.'

"'Ho!' sezee, 'is that your little game?'

"'My little game,' I answeres, 'an' yours likewise.'

At that a fubsy old party in drink and an oil-skin cap—as was treating two females you couldn't call nothing else were you put on your oath to it to gin an' peppermint—put 'is oar in. 'Are you a man or ain't you?' sezee to Dave, 'to allow yourself to be overrode by a petty coat this here way. Pluck up your 'art and stop 'er mouth for 'er.'

"'Stop 'er mouth!' says Dave; 'I'd like to know 'ow you'd set about it.'

"'I'd begin by kissin' it,' says the old wulgarity; 'an' if that didn't do I'd pour some drink down it; an' if that didn't do I'd put my fist into it, I would!' An' 'e grins 'orrid.

"'Would ye?' says Dave, firin' up, an' landed 'im one as felled 'im on the spot.

"'Ere you gal and feller,' says the landlord, bustlin' round the bar, 'I ain't a-goin' to 'ave no assaults. This is a respectable 'ouse. D'jeer?'

"'I 'eer,' I say, 'but should never a-guessed it from the company you encourages. Loafers and deserters—that's your mark.'

"At that 'e goes for me, and similarly the potman for Dave; but Dave jest waved 'is arms as if 'e was swimmin', and them two went to look for the fust one in the sawdust. Then Dave opens the door for me as polite as polite, and out we goes.

"'Now,' I says, 'you come along o' me to barracks, nip, and no mistake about it.'

"'All right,' says Dave; 'I've surrendered to you, Loosha, an' I'm on my parrul not to hook it; but one condition I will make, and that is that you never let me yeer the sword descrier from your lips no more, for that I will not put up with.'

"'All right,' I says, and motions 'im to walk on a'ed, being such a scarecrow as would demean any young woman as valued 'erself to be seen in company with. And we goes in procession to the barracks. I never see a sentry more on the broad grin than that one at the gate when he see Dave brought in a prisoner. 'When you can shut your face, young man,' I sez to him, sharp-like, 'per'aps you'll give Miss Hemman's compliments to the sergeant on duty, and says as she's brought in his—' and I'd nearly said the word; but something in Dave's eye warned me, so I ended up, 'the missin' private of Comp'ny C.'

"The sentry shakes 'is bearskin an' grins, meanin' as 'e's on dooty; so I calls out, 'Guard!' and out tumbles the sergeant an' a corporal and file. They saw Dave, and was goin' to 'url themselves on 'im like tigers, but I throws myself between.

"'No violence,' says Dave, a-droring 'is figger up, and stretching out 'is right arm, commanding-like—'no violence. I take you all to witness as I've surrendered—to my Cousin Loosha! Take me to the black-'ole, Sergeant Mappin, an' report me in the mornin'; but mind you tell the colonel that I surrendered to my Cousin Loosha fust of all.' An' to the last 'e kept repeatin' that as they 'ustled 'im away: an' I b'lieve it 'ad somethin' to do with 'is gettin' let off so easy."—St. James Gazette.

There is to be in the California building at the world's fair a woman's reception room, to which every county in the state is expected to contribute some article of furniture, art or virtu. The women of Alameda county have decided to furnish for this room and donate a life-size portrait of Miss Emma Marwedel, who first introduced the Froebel system of education on the Pacific slope. The framing will be of California woods, made and carved by local talent. Miss Marwedel is now a resident of Berkeley, and well advanced in years.

The immense fund in possession of the state of Texas for educational purposes is mostly loaned to counties who use the money for public works. The state comptroller has invested over $3,000,000 of the permanent school funds in the hands of the various counties, and as yet no default in the payment of interest has been made.

THE SACRED PYTHON,

And the Trouble it Caused There Officers.

They Killed the Monster Reptile,

And Then the King Threatened to Kill Them But was Pacified by Eighty Dollars.

As all the world knows, there is scarcely a year goes by without a rebellion or upheaval of some sort in the outlying portions of her Britannic majesty's dominions—matters, which though insignificant in themselves, generally end in costing more in blood and money than the entire possession is worth, and which render the soldier's life by no means "a happy one." Along in the seventies an anticipated trouble of this kind caused some troops to be dispatched to West Africa, and my regiment happened to be one of the detail, says a writer in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. No trouble occurred after all, and the only foe we had to contend with was the climate, which very probably was quite as deadly as a more palpable one might have approved. Anyhow, the mortality was excessively high both among officers and men. At the time I write two other officers (Maj. Ellis and Lieut. Tuthill) and myself had just been down with a severe attack of intermittent fever, and on the recommendation of the garrison surgeon had been granted two weeks' leave of absence, with a view to taking a trip down the coast on one of the mail steamers that called weekly at our station, Cape Coast castle. Though these ships had accommodation for passengers they were in reality mere trading vessels, and called in at all kinds of queer places in quest of palm oil, the staple trading commodity of West Africa.

One morning we found ourselves at a little village just south of Fernando, Po, but as they happened to have a quantity of oil on hand, were told that the vessel, in all probability would not leave till the following morning. So we determined to to go ashore and "do" the place. We took along a few bottles of trade gin, i. e. vitriol, as a "dhas" to the king, and armed with these passports to his favor, an audience immediately after landing. The gin, as we anticipated, made us free of the place, and his sable majesty treated us with the utmost hospitality, insisting on our taking dinner with him. We endeavored to avoid the ordeal, but couldn't, and to our surprise the viands were quite eatable, and we washed them down with excellent champagne. After dinner he presented us each with a wife, but as we did not see our way to accepting this particular evidence of his good will, we had to decline the honor, thereby incurring the enmity of the girls and insulting the king himself, whom we found it hard to pacify. Eventually, however, we patched up a truce, and he insisted on our sleeping ashore, providing us with a hut apiece for the purpose. We concluded, though, to sleep together, and slung our hammocks in the biggest hut of the three, which happened to be that apportioned to Maj. Ellis, and, as afterward discovered, next to a joss house containing a number of sacred pythons.

All went well until Tuthill and myself were awakened by a species of scuffling, the origin of which was a mystery, and a round oath from Ellis, which was plain enough. My first impression was that there had been an attempt at foul play, or at least robbery, and jumping out of the hammock, I asked what was the matter.

"Matter?" replied Ellis, "why the d—d place is full of snakes the size of your body."

"Oh, come off; you haven't been helping the king to drink his trade gin, have you?"

"I'm not joking; wait till I get a light. I woke up and found one weighing about a ton on my chest."

"It's the yams you ate. Go to sleep, man!" Of course, by this time Tuthill and myself were fully awake, and both of us were firmly convinced that Ellis had been dreaming, but just at that moment he struck a light, and applied it to a primitive lamp with which the place was provided. Sure enough the light revealed to our astonished gaze a huge python squirming lazily immediately under Ellis' hammock. The rapidity with which we regained our hammocks would have done credit to any troupe of acrobats, and there we lay watching the monster as he slowly coiled himself up preparatory to resuming the slumbers which Ellis had so rudely disturbed. I can safely say that my close watch on his movements was actuated by no other motive than an intense horror and dread of the reptile, but I believe that Ellis, whom I never saw rattled under any circumstances, merely experienced feelings of curiosity. "That beggar," he remarked in a meditative manner, "must have come in through the roof and climbed down the ropes of my hammock. When I meet with pythons I like them to be friendly, and," he continued, addressing the creature, "just in case you might take a notion to indulge in a second nap on my chest, I'm going to do for you."

With these words he got gingerly out of the hammock and made for his revolver which was lying on a shelf, the snake's beady eyes following every movement, but otherwise the creature remained impassive, even while Ellis was getting back again, after having got possession of the weapon. "Well, you're the queerest kind of a snake I ever met," went on Ellis as he cocked the hammer, "and I'm glad of it, else it might have been unpleasant for some of us." Then he fired. "That will disturb your equanimity, I reckon," he said, and it did. In a moment there was such a twisting and coiling and uncoiling as to shake the whole hut when the monster's struggling folds occasionally struck its sides, but it quieted down after a while.

Ellis' aim had been good, as it always was, and had broken the python's neck. But our troubles for the night were not yet over. The shot had aroused the whole village, and scores of heads were thrust in at the door, and I noticed that one and all of them wore an expression of surprise and horror when they saw the snake's carcass, though I was far from attributing it to the proper cause.

Dawn came on shortly afterward and we made our preparations for rejoining the ship. But on attempting to leave the hut were politely but firmly told that we could not go, and a band of twenty armed men on the outside gave the intimation a certain amount of weight that it might otherwise have lacked. In vain we pondered on the meaning of this change of front of the erstwhile hospitable natives, and demanded to be taken to the king, with no other result than that of being told we should see him in good time. After awhile we were marched as prisoners to the royal house, being surrounded by armed men. I did not suppose they would dare to do any violence to the three British officers, more especially as the vessel was near to hear evidence of the fact, but things were beginning to look a little bit uncomfortable. The king was attended by two or three hideous looking beings, whom, from their ornaments, we recognized for fetichmen. We were then informed that we had killed one of the sacred pythons, and that the penalty was death. We were asked what we had to say about it. Ellis, who, as usual, regarded the matter as a huge joke, replied that for his part he didn't care a fig whether they killed him or not, but that, if he did, his mother, the queen of England, would send out an army more numerous than a host of white ants, and sweep the king and his nation from the face of the earth; and that, moreover, if he had done any damage he was willing to pay for it. This seemed to strike the king as reasonable, but the fetich men wanted blood, and it took considerable time before they agreed to fix our ransom at some thousands of billions. We didn't have that much with us, but pooled up and raised about $80, which we handed over to the king, and which he was graciously pleased to accept. Half an hour afterward we were aboard the ship eating a good breakfast, and regaling the company with a tale of our adventures.

Heiskell's Ointment

Is a positive cure for all forms of

SKIN DISEASE.

We base this assertion on our observation of over thirty years, in which time a very large number and variety of Skin Diseases have been reported to us as cured, by the simple use of Heiskell's Ointment without the aid of internal remedies. Many of these were cases of long duration, that had resisted the treatment of the most eminent medical talent in this and other countries. Heiskell's Ointment seems never to have failed in a single instance.

MARKETS OF THE WORLD

What the People of the Globe Have to Sell

And What They Are Able to Get for it.

The Grain Trade As Reviewed From Toledo—Local and General Gossip.

The receipts of wheat to-day at Minneapolis and Duluth are 142,357 bus. and at five other western points 915,056 bus.; aggregate 1,057,413 bus. On the corresponding Friday in 1891 the receipts were 1,023,657 bus., but 347,926 bus. of it was northwestern wheat, leaving 675,751 bus. as the movement from the other five points, compared with 915,056 bus. today. Export clearances yesterday at four Atlantic ports were wheat 409,250 bus. and flour to an aggregate of 675,000 bus.

English markets show a little better tone and demand at a decline in prices of wheat and corn.

It is hoped that this check to receipts will relieve the markets and help pricer.

To-day we hear of no new price in ....., and he markets have been unsteady, and most of the time below yesterday's closing.

Corn has had its day in court, and the verdict is against the 50c fellows. It will take an early frost to rally it. To-day the markets have again squatted badly.

The markets for both wheat and corn have been active. Wheat for December regained the loss, but corn closed at lowest point.

The enormous movement of wheat from farmers' hands on this crop has been more than all other factors a depressing element. Prices of wheat in interior Indiana and Illinois, to farmers say a range of 45 to 60 per bus, give a poor compensation to the husbandman. Kansas and Nebraska farmers are faring worse. The central and southern portions, where the hard wheat is produced, are selling the very best grades at 50c bushel. These are by no means remunerative prices. American farmers have by this large movement of their surplus, lowered the prices around the world.

The president's proclamation had a bracing effect on prices orf wheat and Chicago made a start of 1-2c advance, but there seems to be too much wheat and the market does not stand hitched. Sales by farmers have been checked up, but the accumulations at the stations are coming forward to meet sales already made.

Liverpool market is reported as closing 1-2d higher.

In New York October wheat closed at 80 1-8c, a loss of 1-4c; December at 83 3-8c, a loss of 1-8c. September corn at 54 3-4c, a loss of 1-4c; October at 54 5-8c, a loss of 1 3-8c; October oats at 38c, a loss of 1-2c.

In Chicago, October wheat closed at 74 1-2c, a loss of 1-2c; December at 76 7-8c, a loss of 1-8c. September corn at 47c, a loss of 1 3-4c; October at 47 1-2c, a loss of 2c. October oats at 33 3-8c, a loss of 5-8c.

In Toledo, the business in wheat futures has been fairly active with about the usual vacations in prices. There has been, we think, a better tone in the deal on the expectation of a lessened movement of wheat.

Opeing prices were at a shade above yesterday's closing, declining 3-4c from highest price on September, and 3-8c on December, and nearly recovering the loss. At close September was 1-4c, October 3-8c, December 1-8c, and May 1-8c lower. On the call September sold at 76 5-8c, October at 77c, December at 79 1-2c, and May at 85 to 84 3-4c, closing at 84 7-8c. On the regular board September sold at 76 3-8 to 75 5-8c.

Closed at 76c bid; October at 79 3-4c to 78 3-4c and closed at 79c bid; May at 84 1-2c to 84c and closed at 84 3-8c.

Cash Wheat—The business was most active in No. 3 soft, but a fair quantity of No. 2 was represented in the sales. The latter sold at 76c to 75 3-4c and closed at 76c, a loss of 1-4c; No. 3 soft at 68c to 68 3-4c covering the range of deliveries. Some sales as large as 67 3-4c, closing 68c bid. On the call December No. 3 soft sold at 71 1-2c and after the call September at 68 3-4c L. S.; 68 1-2c D. & M., and 68c W.; December at 71c; No. 4 soft at 60c and 61c in L. S.; rejected No. 1 at 64c; sample at 65c, closing 63c; No. 2 at 30, 49 and 50c; weevily, 65c; No. 2 R. & W., 73c; No. 3 R. & W. at 66c; No. 1 white at 74 1-2c; No. 2 at 72c.

Corn—No. 2 at 48 1-2c, and September at 48 1-2c. On the call May sold at 52c. Rye—No. 3 at 50c; rejected at 43c.

Clover seed—There was moderate trading only. Prices opened steady and closed a shade higher; October at $5.62 1-2, closing at $5.67 1-2; November at $5.60; prime for cash at $5.80.

A TRIUMPH OF LEATHER.

The History and Mystery of the Shoe in All Ages.

From the beginning the shoe has been something more than a mere article of commerce, says the Boston Journal. It has been an index of the taste of the time. The antiquarian can construct a civilization from a given shoe, as Cuvier built the animal from the bone. The painter finds a delight in the reproduction of a leathery past when cavaliers were booted and spurred. The history of the shoe is a magazine of singular facts and superstitions, a storehouse of the caprices of men and women. As in other articles of dress there has been a rotation in fashion, from the days when Egyptians wore sandals of leather, palm leaves or papyrus, to the time when Queen Mary restricted the width of the toe to six inches; from the custom of the New England squaw to wear "shooes of Mose skinnens, which is the pricipall leather used to that purpose," to the summer habit of white shoes that accompany a gown and adorn a piazza. The barefooted "little man," so lovingly described by Whittier, can point to Socrates or Cato, in whose footsteps he follows. The stern Spartans were partial to red shoes. The silken shoes of the last century were adorned with buckles and gold and silver stars; and the sabot of the French peasant, when it is intended for house use, is curiously ornamented. In the olden time, in the days when Alcibiades was the talk of the Athenians as he sauntered in the streets, shoes were named after him, as now an actor inspires the fancy in a cravat. There was once a famous swell in England, long before Beau Brummel, so long ago that he ate his dinner about 10 o'clock in the morning, and gave his whole mind to the extension of toe points "twisted like a ram's horn." For women are not alone in their fastidiousness and love of personal display. Even the magistrates of Rome were particular in the appearance of their shod feet.

But there are books without number that deal with this subject in fantastical or serious manner. When Popes thought it worth while to thunder against extravagance in the device or ornamentation of shoes, why should not the lovers of the curious trace of evolution of the modern shoe from the thong-tied sandal? The humblest French woman any have a simple robe, but she is shod most carefully. She knows the irrestible power of this weapon; she shares this knowledge with her sisters of all lands. Suckling, in England has sung the praises of such feet; Restif de la Bretonne has told in famous words of the mighty influence of a well-made little boot, and is there not a disease, or rather a mania, for stealing women's shoes known to the Germans as "Frauenschustehlmonomanie"—a formidable name that magnifies the guilt of the performance? Or why should women be compelled to wear shoes, or boots, or slippers that war against her taste, simply to gratify the advocate of health? Would the feet of antique goddesses, if they were turned into human flesh, incite the poet or haunt the lover? The woman of to-day does not envy her sister of China; she wishes a becoming foot dress, just as 300 years ago Margery, the good wife of Simon Evre, exclaimed with just pride: "Roger, thou know'st the size of my foot; as it is none the biggest, so, I thank God, it is handsome enough; prithee, let me have a pair of shoes made, cork, good Roger, wooden heel, too."

Fashions change for men and women. The terms boot and shoe are used loosely although the boot proper goes above the ankle. Bluchers, Wellingtons, high-lows are now unknown to us. Bue the glory of the American shoe remains, a fixed and settled quantity. Over a century ago it was reported in the London Chronicle that shoes for women were made at Lynn exceeding in strength and beauty any that were usually imported from London. It is true that the American shoemaker has been fortunate in his models, but the feet of men have been as tenderly treated. Not without reason does the Boot and Shoe club of this city hold days of jollification; not without reason does the newspaper of the craft exult in a long and illustrated supplement. The method of manufacture has changed since the days of honest Thomas Dekker, and "rubbing-pin, stopper, dresser, four sorts of awls, two balls of wax, paring knife, hand and thumb leathers and good St. Hugh's bones" may in part have now a foreign sound; but now, as in that illustrious "Shoemaker's Holiday" that pleased the Queen's Most Excellent Majesty, shoemakers are still "gentlemen of the gentle craft, true Trojans, courageous cord-wainers; they all kneel to the shrine of holy Saint Hugh."

SELF PRAISE.

Self praise is no recommendation, but there are times when one must permit a person to tell the truth about himself. When what he says is supported by the testimony of others no reasonable man will doubt his word. Now, to say that Allcocks' Porous Plasters are the only genuine and reliable porous plasters made is not self praise in the slightest degree. They have stood the test for over thirty years, and in proof of their merits it is only necessary to call attention to the cures they have effected and to the voluntary testimonials of those who have used them.

Beware of imitations, and do not be deceived by misrepresentation. Ask for Allcock's, and let no solicitation or explanation induce you to accept a substitute.

THE TRUE LAXATIVE PRINCIPLE

Of the plants used in manufacturing the pleasant remedy, Syrup of Figs, has a permanently beneficial effect on the human system, while the cheap vegetable extracts and mineral solutions, usually sold as medicines, are permanently injurious. Being well-informed, you will use the true remedy only. Manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co.

OUR NEW YORK BROTHERS' CRY.

Joe Kerr, the well known humorist, added by Mr. Alfred E. Pearsall, his invented a cry for the press club, after the order of the college cries. It is so good that it will probably be adopted by the members of the press club generally for use at club reunions and dinners. It runs as follows:

Period, comma, colon, dash;
Sometimes pi and sometimes hash,
Headline, paragraph, column, space,
Editor's shears and printers' case,
Dash, dash! Cash, cash!
Woh up! Way up!
Press Club.

This, when committed to memory, and repeated in concert by a number of persons, fast and with increasing emphasis on each succeeding line, makes a most effective club cry.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Always buy fine shoes at Flory & Baker's. They have the largest assortment at lowest prices.

Mr. Whiting will return from his vacation Sept. 3. Will receive his pupils after Sept. 5, 1892.

THE SUNBEAM.

One of the most beautiful discoveries in science that has been made within the last year or two is that a beam of light produces sound. A beam of sunlight is thrown into a glass vessel that contains black, colored silk or worsted substances. A disk having slits cut in it is made to revolve in this beam of light so as to cut it, making alternate flashes and shadow.

On putting the vessel, strange sounds are heard as the flashing beam is falling on it. Recently a more wonderful use has been made. A beam of sunlight is passed through a prism to produce what is called the solar rainbow. The disk is turned and the light of the rainbow is made through it.

Now place the vessel containing the silk, wool or material. As the colored light spectrum falls upon it sounds will be heard by different parts of the spectrum there will be silence in other parts.

For instance, if the cloth contains red worsted and that part flashes upon it loud sounds will be heard. Only feeble sounds will be heard when the red and blue parts of the rainbow fall upon the vessel, and other colors sound at all. Green silk gives out a loud sound in a red light.

Every kind of cloth gives more or less sound in colors and utters no sound in others.—Boston Weekly.

DE DAGTOUGH,

And He Wo'Bust" in Responsycott.

"I say, Chimboycrott him." The New York Sporter heard one of Brooklyn's gamins make this remark. The boy about 6 years old and his companion probably a year younger. They were on Flatbush avenue, a few blocks above Fulton street.

"All right, Pas de stuff," the younger boy replied.

"Den you skirm the avenoo an I'll go up, and all of der boys to go inwid us."

They skirmished 10 minutes and rounded up witlys, all under 6 years of age.

"What's de deef de newcomers inquired.

"It's like dis," explained "Chimmy" with much earnestness. "Dat Dago over dere sold Paddywid a rotten spot in it, and wouldn't him no good pear in place of it is goin' to boycott him till he do."

"What's a boy the smallest boy inquired.

"Oh, say, don't yer take no noospaper?" inquiringly scornfully. "A boycrott is a Dago sells you rotten fruit and all de oder boys what pals wid yead bat agrees not to buy no more ten de Dago, and he busts up, and of de boys give him de laff."

"Did Paddy's Dago de rotten pear back?" the boy asked.

"He took back de core and de rotten place, but I wanted all of de pear or no trade, good was a rotten pear if de Dago intend to work it off on some of pilers for another penny?"

"It ain't necessake back de whole pear when dere ten place in it," Paddy further explained.

"Den boycrott exclaimed one of the boys.

"Put yer lef' in yer hearts and hold up yer righ'" ordered "Chimmy," and all of them obeyed.

"Now repeat way. 'We do herby pledge ourselves ter buy no more fruit off en dat Dill he busts up an' has ter go blackins fer a living.'"

The boys repeated nearly as they could, the pledge, then, at the suggestion of "Chimmy," crossed the avenue and sat down on a rib in the shade of a tree to watch the ass of the Italian's bankruptcy. They still watching two hours later when a reporter returned from a trip further avenue. In the meantime they had one recruit and appeared to be in strength. The Italian was, however, still doing business three days later, the "boycrotters" were not in sight.

HE IS NOT ILLIONAIRE.

So far as is known the northernmost newspaper in the world is the Nord-Kap, published and edited Hammerfest, Norway, by P. Johan A member of the staff of the Copenhagen Politiken recently paid a visit to his distinguished colleague in the far-off town. Mr. Johansen received him with open arms, as it was the first time he had seen a foreign newspaper man. The Nord-Kap is published in a small wooden house, covered by an earthen roof. Of his surroundings, however, the editor appeared to be in the best of spirits and follow his profession with the enthusiasm which characterizes so many of his brethren. The subscribers of the Nord-Kap, it is true, are obliged to wait some time for news of important events taking place in the various parts of the world. As there is no telegraph office in the small town, and Mr. Johansen is obliged to depend on the mails and newspapers which arrive by the vessels landing at Hammerfest. Many of the subscribers, too, live at a great distance from the town, and a week or more passes by before the paper can reach them after publication. Many of the readers, however, call at the office of the Nord-Kap, and present the editor with fish of various kinds in exchange for his paper. Mr. Johansen is not a millionaire.—New York Tribune.
